FALMOUTH, Va., Wednesday, Nov. 26.

It is expected the railroad will be finished to-morrow from Aquia Creek to the Rappahannock, opposite Fredericksburgh. The bridge over Potomac Creek was reported this morning as nearly completed. The cars carry supplies to far on Brook's Station, six miles from Aquia Creek, which greatly ease our forces.

Notwithstanding the late bad condition of the roads, Quartermasters supplies have been promptly furnished. Long lines of roads have been corduroyed under direction of Col. TRAIN, Chief Quartermaster of the army, and are in good condition.

The camp-fires of the enemy are constantly increasing within sight of Falmouth, affording indications of augmentation of the rebel forces. Last night Colonel LAMOUREUX and A. P. HILL, D. H. HILL and JOHNSON are known to be on the way hither.

Yesterday the enemy were busily engaged in constructing additional works, in the rear and to the left of Fredericksburgh.

The cars bring troops and supplies regularly to the rebel troops, stopping at a point three miles from the town.

REPORTS FROM FAIRFAX COURT-HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Nov. 26—10:45 P. M.

The TIMES special correspondent telegraphs from Fairfax Court-house:

"Information received to-day is to the effect that the rebels are still in front of us in considerable force. Gen. BURNSIDE's scouts report JACKSON's headquarters at Upperville, and STUART's at Salem; also, that there is a company of black horse cavalry at Warrenton, and another company at Waterloo Bridge, and a portion of WISE's Cavalry at Aldie.

THE RAID INTO POOLESVILLE.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Nov. 26.

The parties making the raid on Poolesville, Md., yesterday morning, consisted of about fifty Maryland men, principally belonging to Montgomery County, in which that village is located. They crossed the Potomac not long ago to avoid the draft, and took temporary service with the rebels, joining WISE's guerrillas. They doubtless designed to capture valuable Government military property reported in that vicinity, and of the removal of which they were ignorant. They watched the ford at which they crossed for an hour after our patrols passed up beyond it, and then dashed over and into the village. They spent five or six hours with their families and friends.

LETTERS FROM FALMOUTH.

An Illustration of the Danger of Delay—What Might Have Been Done, but What Was Not Done—Great Increase of the Rebel Forces—The Passage of the Rappahannock to be Hotly Disputed—Hints of a Flank Movement, &c.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY POTOMAC, FALMOUTH, Tuesday, Nov. 25, 1862.

The present situation of the Army of the Potomac presents a good illustration of the perpetual advantage which a force operating vigorously on the defensive with admirable results can gain over a timid and unenterprising aggressor. The simple matter of occupying a petty stream less than a hundred yards wide, and little over knee-deep, from the commencement of this month to a week ago, has at this date grown to be a perilous enterprise, which we have not yet executed, and which we shall certainly not be able to execute without very considerable loss of life.

It is just a week ago to-day since the Right Grand Division of the Army of the Potomac, under command of Major-Gen. SUMNER, halted the head of its column on the Rappahannock at this place. A squadron of cavalry and four pieces of artillery composed the contemptible force present to bar our passage. Not a regiment of infantry, not a foot of fortification, was there. Everybody knows what the impetuous SUMNER cannon at the head of the division wanted to do. What he had to do was to obey orders, and those orders commanded him he should not cross the river. A single battery of 10-pounder Parrotts, placed on a commanding eminence on the side of the river, in an hour silenced the enemy's guns, and made the passage free to us. It was not even allowed to go over and take possession of the disabled rebel cannon. We slept that night on the north bank of the Rappahannock. Tuesday morning we found six guns in position, better placed than before, and commanding the ford. Wednesday morning there were ten. Thursday saw the defenses increased by a section on our left (the rebel right.) Friday, by a section on our right (the rebel left)—thus giving them a direct and a double cross-fire upon us. Saturday morning disclosed the result of an industrious night's work; the guns were protected by intrenchments in front, and yesterday, on riding out with Gen. HUNT, Chief of Artillery, for the purpose of selecting positions for batteries, we found the rebel batteries on right, centre and left admirably covered from our fire by breastworks and epaulements.

Nor have they contented themselves to fortifying. Very large reinforcements have been brought up from Richmond. Day and night for days have been busily at work transporting troops. Night by night the camp-fires that light up the heights behind the range of hills back of Fredericksburgh have increased and multiplied. What the strength of the rebel force may be we have no means of knowing definitely; but it is seriously estimated from twenty-five to a hundred thousand. LONGSTREET's whole corps (twenty thousand) we know to be there, as the transactions attending the surrender of the town the other day, were conducted on the rebel side by officers of his SIGL. Two members of a South Carolina regiment belonging to LONGSTREET's command, who deserted and made their escape over to our side of the river on Friday night, inform us that HOOD's (D. H.) division was arriving at the time they left; and reports at headquarters have it that LEE, JACKSON, and, indeed, the main body of the rebel army have come up from Richmond and Gordonsville, and are now waiting our attack directly in our front.

All the signs and omens, therefore, promise that the possession of Fredericksburgh will be vigorously disputed by the rebel army; and from the present outlook it is not at all impossible that the next forty-eight hours may witness a first-class battle at this place. There are many reasons why they should make a stand here. Other things being equal they are very anxious to fight as far away as possible from Richmond, and they are eager to take advantage of supposed demoralization of the troops and want of confidence in the new Commander, and defeat us in the first encounter under BURNSIDE. But their supreme motive in opposing our passage of the Rappahannock is, of course, to delay us as long as possible; occupy the remaining fine weather in secondary operations; throw us into the bad weather; put sixty miles of bottomless road and all the fearful odds of a Winter campaign between us and Richmond. Let us frankly confess it. In that case, with the incredible difficulty of transportation and the fearful mortality that must result among the troops, it is an enterprise full, of peril, and he must be sanguine indeed that would see in it only the chances of success.

The position which the Confederates have selected at Fredericksburgh is an admirable one, and puts every advantage on their side. Immediately opposite where we shall have to land on crossing the stream, precisely opposite Falmouth and a little to the right of Fredericksburgh, is a level plain, running back from the river a mile. At this point the land swells up, en terrace, forming a bare plateau; and back of this again rises a higher range of land, the heights well wooded. The crest and foretop of the first ridge are well lined with guns, and as the outline of river and ridge curve round in the segment of a circle, they are able to get admirable enfilading fires from each side. Behind the secondary range where the hills reach their highest elevation and break down from the horizon on the other side, the unknown force of the enemy lies concealed. Supposing, therefore, that under fire of the batteries planted on our side of the river, the work of throwing over the troops is successfully accomplished, there then remains an interval of a mile, utterly sans shelter, and a steep and difficult ascent over and up which the men will have to pass—exposed to a thrice murderous front and cross fire of schrapnel, case and canister. The great authority of NAPOLEON is on record to the effect that no troops can withstand the fire of sixteen guns over the space of a thousand toises. You see, therefore, the task before us. It is true, the batteries planted on the heights on our side the river may be relied upon to embarrass the gunnery of the rebels; but the distance (from 2,500 to 3,000 yards) is too great for either artillery force to be able to do the other any very serious damage. Besides, precisely at that point where our batteries should be of most service—namely, where the troops come under the hottest fire of the enemy's guns—we shall have to cease firing for fear of destroying our own men. But supposing that by an exercise of that sublime courage of which our troops are capable, they storm and reach this plateau; there then remains another and secondary range of fortified heights to take, and behind them the serried columns of rebel infantry. Imagine that we meet with a repulse; that in the meanwhile the rebel batteries have been able to knock to pieces the pontoon bridge; we have then before us the appalling contingency of our broken columns flying to a river which at high tide is up to a man's neck, and, from its extremely rocky and slippery bottom, is excessively difficult of crossing. Does the image of a new, but far more terrible Ball's Bluff rise on the mind?

You naturally ask, if such are the difficulties, do not the resources of military strategy afford the means of attaining, by indirect means, an end which, by direct means, is so perilous? It is in this direction we look, and we all hope that Gen. BURNSIDE is taking such measures as will enable us to obtain possession of Fredericksburgh with much less slaughter than forcing a passage in front must necessitate. His plan may be to feint in front, and crossing some miles up or down the stream, turn the flank of the rebel position, and compel a retreat and a defeat. We have heard much of a "trap," which the wily foe has laid for us in this vicinity. It seems now to be no other than their supposed ability to draw over a portion of troops and cut them to pieces before they could get back. BURNSIDE will show them a trick worth two of that. The gunboats, we hear, have arrived in the Rappahannock, a few miles below this point, and would admirably cover a landing, say at Moss's or Skinner's Neck, whence an oblique line might be taken direct for a point on the rebel flank and rear. The pontoons also have arrived to-day, and there is every probability that before this reaches you, present speculations and anticipations will be set wholly aside by the tremendous reality of battle. W. R.

Additional Batteries Erected by the Enemy—Rebel Reinforcements—Our Troops Getting Ready for Action—Arrival of the Pontoon Bridge—Preparations for Crossing the River, &c.

FALMOUTH, Va., OPPOSITE FREDERICKSBURGH, Monday, Nov. 24, 1862.

During Saturday night several new batteries were erected by the rebels on the hills to the right of Fredericksburgh, and intrenchments thrown up in front of them. Additional camp-fires in the rear and to the left of the place also proved the arrival of heavy infantry reinforcements. It is now very apparent to my mind that the rebels from the first have had no intention of holding the place, but that all their movements looking to such an event are a mere ruse for the purpose of gaining time for bringing forward their forces from Gordonsville.

We spent all day yesterday in clearing for action. The various encampments were moved back to the rear to some distance beyond the reach of the enemy's guns. Meanwhile, the troops formerly held their former position on the Stafford turnpike in a delightful grove close by the road leading to Belle Plain. The guns were unmasked, made ready for the work of the morrow or day following, ammunition trains brought up their valuable cargoes, wagons were cleared away, and everything done to facilitate operations.

The train of pontoon bridges which should have been here long since commenced arriving yesterday afternoon. When Gen. BURNSIDE left Warrenton, it was the distinct understanding with the military authorities at Washington that these essential paraphernalia to a passage of the Rappahannock, should meet here. Their failure to arrive has continued the delay in operations. The roads are rapidly improving in condition, and if we have no more rain, will soon be in good running order again. The Railroad to Aquia Creek has not been opened yet. The Ruby Baker makes a trip daily from Washington to that point. A mail leaves every morning from this place for Washington.

Conversation between our own and the rebel pickets has been kept up. On Saturday evening a rebel officer waded the river to a small island about half way across, when he met a member of a Massachusetts regiment. A lively conversation ensued, in which Mr. Rebel stated that it was the general impression among their men that the battle of Antietam was a mere skirmish in comparison to the engagement about to come off. LONGSTREET was a short distance out of Fredericksburgh with his command, and was expected on the following day with the entire rebel army of Virginia. There may have been some truth in his remarks, but he was evidently talking for effect. Three engines left the place on Saturday for Richmond. Several shells were thrown by Capt. PERRY's Battery, but failed to stop them.

Last night was the coldest we have thus far experienced, occasioning considerable suffering among the men. To-day is mild and delightful.

LATER.—At 4 o'clock this morning a flag of truce was received from Fredericksburgh. The enemy still refuse to surrender the place, but promise that no more troops shall be brought to the city. It is understood that our pontoon bridge shall be thrown across to-day. Three companies of the Fifteenth New-York, under Major MAGUIRE, have charge of its construction. Our guns will immediately open a return fire on the rebels, if they attempt to prevent the laying of the bridge with their batteries. J.

The Enjoyment of the Sabbath—The Weather Again Favorable for Army Operations—Movements of the Enemy—The Intrenchments—Probable Surrender of the City, &c.

CAMP OPPOSITE FREDERICKSBURGH, VA., Monday, Nov. 24, 1862.

The troops yesterday enjoyed a quiet Sunday in all the camps. The day was spent in conformity with the wishes and orders of the President, such work only as was absolutely necessary being performed. Some of the camps were changed from uncomfortable or unhealthy quarters, and provision trains which were on the road moved from Potomac Creek toward their respective camps. Otherwise the time was occupied quite in accordance with the late orders, and very much to the satisfaction of the soldiers. The weather was blustering, but clear and bracing. From the signal station near Gen. BURNSIDE's headquarters, where Lieut. HALL watched the movements of the enemy on the opposite side of the river, new earthworks were discovered, new guns in position, and considerable activity apparent in and around the town. Squads of rebel cavalry moved furtively along the skirt of woods which occupy the hills, and working parties were plainly seen busy on the breastworks. Their number, and even the color of their clothes could be distinguished. The chief of these works, which were for the protection of their gunners, were considerably to the north and west of the town. They are erected upon the most commanding hills, and occupy a sort of semi-circle extending from a point nearly opposite the village of Falmouth, to a line drawn from the river through the centre of the town. They are about half a mile, or three-quarters at most, from the river, and could only reply to our batteries on the high land this side. It would be difficult for them to obstruct a working party engaged in constructing the pontoon bridge in the bed of the river, as it would be too low and wholly out of range. No train has arrived at or departed from the town since the notice to quit sent by Gen. BURNSIDE on Thursday. Heavy guns were arriving here all night, and were placed in position, including 32-pounder Parrotts. The pontoon lumber arrived on Saturday, and the boats last evening. To-day operations will commence in earnest. The bridge will be thrown across, and preparations completed for crossing the whole army. I am still of the opinion that the negotiations pending between the Commanding General and the rebel authorities, civil and military, will result in the surrender of the town, as its destruction would be a useless sacrifice of property, not to mention the suffering it would cause innocent parties, which nothing but the most urgent military necessity could justify.

The weather is clear, cold and crisp—just what is required for active movements. Plans for crossing the river are far advanced. E. S.

Movements of Gen. Hooker's Division—Destitution of the Country Around Warrenton—Starvation Threatening the People—Fredericksburgh—Gen. Burnside's Headquarters.

FALMOUTH, OPPOSITE FREDERICKSBURGH, VA., Wednesday, Nov. 19, 1862.

The grand division of the army composing the centre, under command of Major-Gen. HOOKER, left its encampment near Warrenton on Monday morning at daylight, simultaneously with headquarters, and took the road toward Warrenton Junction. As the last part of the cavalcade, wagons and troops marched through the town, there was a perceptible increase of citizen spectators, who, to a great extent, had hitherto kept themselves within doors. Ladies came out and promenaded, exchanging gratified glances at the Yankee exodus. As the troops had been in motion for the previous three days, no doubt due notice had been sent to the rebels outside the Union lines. By 2 o'clock P. M. the town, which for a week and a day had been overrun with the army, resumed its normal quiet. But mingled with the eyes rejoicing at our departure, there must have been many sorrowful regrets among the speculative and money-loving part of the population. Up to the time of our arrival we were assured that the town was utterly emptied of most of the necessaries of life, and fabulous prices prevailed for everything. Coffee, sugar, tea and salt could not be had at any price. At the hotel the most primitive fare was all that could be obtained at the exhibitant charges. Many little luxuries were obtained through the commissaries, or other officers in small quantities; and those who furnished themselves in defiance of the most meagre kind, did not scruple to demand 50 cts and $1 per day. Everything in the shape of forage for horses, for five or six miles around Warrenton, was necessarily consumed. Wherever the owners took the oath of allegiance they were promptly paid the full value of all that was taken. In most cases, however, the Government was saved the expenditure, as the strong rebel proclivities of the inhabitants led them to reject the condition. As we shall hold the railroad as far as Manassas Junction this rebel community will—as it deserves—be left alone in its glory, with no communication with the outside world. Their prospect for the approaching Winter is truly pitiable, without crops, forage, food, or a currency, even if permitted to find a market; there must be great suffering, if not actual starvation, during the next nine months, should the war continue. Could the innocent be separated from the guilty, how gladly would the North pour in succor to this suffering population. Those who sent corn by the ship-load to the starving people of Ireland would not permit their own kinsmen to famish at their doors. Many of those who are able to emigrate will leave, to spend life in surrounds of misery on the North. Those with "the willing and the obedient," they may "eat the good of the land."

Throughout our march the farms, large and small, had been deserted, or were lying waste. The occupants and laborers have all emigrated, voluntarily, or by compulsion. The more wealthy have fled to Fredericksburgh or Richmond, taking with them all the slaves they had left. The young and middle-aged have been swept into the Southern army by the merciless conscription, or are hiding in the woods to escape it; while here and there may be found a decrepid old negro, "minding the farm," and the "great house" deserted, windowless and going to ruin. In every case where the proprietor has remained the property has been respected. The absence of the owner is instinctively construed by the soldiers as indicating the secession character of the fugitive. "The wicked flee when no man pursueth"—and they treat the case accordingly.

We halted for a night near Warrenton Junction, and broke camp at daylight on Tuesday morning. The roads, fortunately, were still in good condition, a light rain rendering the clayey soil only a little sticky. The troops marched rapidly, and, as in all cases when on the move, seemed in excellent spirits. It is only while lying inactive in camp that the soldier becomes moody and dispirited.

At the Stafford Court-house Cross Roads, some ten miles from Falmouth, our column came up with the rear of Gen. FRANKLIN's. Gen. BURNSIDE's headquarters, with the Ninth Army Corps, also halted here for the night. The tents having been pitched and supper disposed of, the soldiers retired to rest under the soothing influence of the band of the One Hundred and Third New-York, which discovered eloquent music from a hillside opposite to the General's headquarters. Two of your correspondents, with their jaded horses, found a comfortable shelter with the gentlemanly Colonel of the Ninth New-York, KURTZ's Zouaves. I have forgotten, as yet, to mention that a company of this well-drilled and efficient regiment has been detailed for special duty in connection with Gen. BURNSIDE's headquarters.

At a very early hour this morning our whole column was again on the march, and your correspondent, thus far occupying the post assigned him with the centre, pushed forward toward Fredericksburgh, passing Gen. SUMNER's headquarters some three miles in advance, his grand division being encamped in a grove of pine about six miles from the town. At 10 o'clock to-day, myself and your correspondent with Gen. FRANKLIN, arrived at Falmouth, where we found a small party of cavalry, and a company of Gen. BURNSIDE's sharpshooters, under command of Capt. SHALDON. The rebel pickets occupied positions on the opposite bank of the river, near Picklin's Mill, and during the intervals of fog which rested over the stream, could be plainly seen pacing their respective beats. The river seemed lower than when we were here in August. There was the same woe-begone and deserted appearance of the decayed little village—only more so. Men, or the shadows of them, in dilapidated grey and seedy hats, lounged at the corners, and gazed inquisitively at the new (old) comers. Only one or two stores, with a very brief stock, opened their doors to invite trade. A crowd of hungry soldiers were crouching into a dim, low cellar and emerging with loaves of smoking bread—the only visible sign of the staff of life to be seen in the place. After a fruitless search of one hour to find food for our horses, we went down opposite Fredericksburgh, in company with Gen. BURNSIDE and Staff. Capt. SHALDON, with his pickets of sharpshooters, followed the bank of the river, the rebel pickets being in sight, and within easy rifle range all the way. Neither side attempted to fire. Gathered about an old stone house, at the upper part of the town, was a party of forty odd rebel cavalry, who left as we passed down. Knots of citizens were visible at the doors and at the corners of the streets, curiously scanning our forces which now began to appear along the higher bank of the Rappahannock. Parties of cavalry could be seen moving from street to street in the town. The sound of the locomotive whistle could be heard, and the rumbling of trains arriving and departing the town on the Richmond and Fredericksburgh Railroad. Carts loaded with household goods moved along the streets as if the citizens were moving away, and the screaming of pigs which were being snatched hurriedly from their pens, and the hasty motions of the few citizens that could be seen, indicated a pretty general flight of the inhabitants. The negro quarters and poorer class of houses seemed to be occupied, but no smoke emerged from first-class chimneys, and the town wore a more deserted aspect than it did four months ago.

The half-dozen stone abutments were all that remained of the wire suspension bridge, and the trestle-work on which the railroad crossed the river below was all gone except a single span near the opposite shore. Adjutant-Gen. RUTHERFORD, Commissary General, Dr. RUTHERFORD, and other members of the staff, with Gen. BURNSIDE, soon reached the Lacey House, and took possession, and a few minutes later, Gen. BURNSIDE, with a single aid, reached his old headquarters. He dismounted, held a brief consultation with Gen. SUMNER and Gen. COUCH, who came up at the same instant, and after designating the camping-ground of the respective corps, and of his own headquarters—which he said would be with his men, in tents, and not in the house—the General rode away in the rain to his quarters. The Lacey Mansion will only be occupied for necessary business offices during the brief time the army will remain on the north bank of the river.

Cavalry scouts were seen upon the hills a mile back of and to the right of the town, watching the arrival of our immense army. I think it is their intention to dispute our passage of the river at any point, even at the expense of the town, should the attempt be made by our forces to cross here. Others think there is no considerable force in our front. It should be borne in mind that the Confederate army always makes it a point to keep concealed; to deceive us as to its strength, and to take by surprise. Gen. BURNSIDE will not be entrapped, depend upon it. The route by the way of Aquia Creek will henceforth be the favorite one for communication with our base, and, as soon as the road is restored, will be daily.

It has been a rainy day, and much discomfort has been suffered by the soldiers for want of straw. Let those who sleep on downy beds at home think of the soldier, whose only resting place after the weary march is the cheerless ground, with only two yards of canvas which between him and the black clouds and rain of November. E. S.

FROM THE SEVENTH ARMY CORPS.

The Movements of Jackson—Various Reports—Condition of Affairs at Richmond, and of the Rebel Army.

CUMBERLAND, Va., Monday, Nov. 24, 1862.

As the whereabouts of the rebel JACKSON seems to be the great mystery of the day, of course your readers will expect to learn something of his movements from this section, where, it is generally believed, he has been sitting about for the last two weeks. For once, this notorious rebel has been complimented; he had undoubtedly prepared a plan for falling upon this corps—or behind it—while distributed about Salem, New-Baltimore and Thoroughfare Gap. This arrangement was spoiled however by a little strategy—the retrograde movement to this point, at the moment Gen. BURNSIDE marched toward Fredericksburgh with the bulk of the Army of the Potomac. The falling back of this corps puzzled the Rebs, for they did not know how to interpret it. Was the advance only a feint? This they were not able to answer until Gen. BURNSIDE had been defeated before Fredericksburgh. Their plan, long contemplated was, no doubt, to attack Washington the moment Gen. BURNSIDE moved toward Richmond—not with any hope of capturing or destroying the Capital, but to create an impression abroad that they were really the besiegers and not the besieged. The retrograde movement of Gen. SIGEL doubtless saved us the disagreeable necessity of having to drive back a rebel horde from Washington. Reliable information has been received to-day that this project has been abandoned, and that JACKSON, with the bulk of his force, is making for Richmond, or is going in that direction—leaving the whole northern part of Virginia to the mercy of WISE's rebel guerrillas and the Yankees. Snicker's, Ashby's and Thoroughfare Gaps, and Warrenton, have been successively abandoned. The last rebel of JACKSON's pickets was at Berryville. WISE's guerrillas—90 in number—composed of the vilest ruffians that ever infested any community, were seen to-day at Leesburgh and Mount Gilead. Yesterday a portion of the force was at Martinsburgh. JACKSON commenced his southward movement on Saturday last. The same night he was at Salem, and on the following day at Warrenton. HANSON's Legion of 2,300 men having marched from the same place on the Culpepper Road the day previous. The rebel soldiers were received with every mark of affection in both of the towns named, and were urged forward to save the capital. A man who saw HANSON's forces at Warrenton assures me that they are in a most wretched condition—destitute of clothing and tents sufficient to protect them from the inclemency of the weather, and that they are greatly demoralized. As an evidence of the latter condition he states that when the order was given to leave Warrenton the men actually refused to obey it, unless furnished with food and clothing, and twelve hours elapsed before the force could be got out of the place.

A paroled prisoner, who arrived here to-day direct from Richmond, states that he saw, while there, large gangs of conscripts going out to work in the fortifications, and no less than sixteen heavy siege guns passed through the city for the works. At Culpepper there was a large force of infantry and several batteries, and immense quantities of provisions were being forwarded from the Shenandoah Valley to Richmond. The people of Richmond told my informant that they were ready for the Yankees.

The general tenor of the above statements is confirmed by a deserter from the rebel ranks, who also arrived here to-day.

The reported driving in of our pickets at Bull Run, a few days since, originated in the fact that an advanced picket of two men, stationed at Gainesville, was compelled to leave that place and come into Centreville by another than the regular road. They saw 100 of WISE's Cavalry at Gainesville, and escaped from them through the agency of a citizen.

DEPARTMENT OF THE CUMBERLAND

Crittenden's Corps at Cedar Creek—The Country Infested by Guerrillas—Numbers of Our Men Captured—The Rebels in Possession of Lebanon—Rumored Movements of the Rebels—Brisk Cannonading Ahead.

From Our Own Correspondent.

CEDAR CREEK, WILSON CO., TENN., Monday, Nov. 17, 1862.

CRITTENDEN's corps of the army still remains at this point, though indications are that it will be speedily thrown forward to act in concert with the other columns now moving southward. The causes that have operated to keep us idle here for several days, have been, first, the want of supplies, without which an advance was impossible, and which had to be brought here on wagons from Mitchelville, near the Kentucky State line; and, second, Gallatin being a favorite point of attack by the rebels, and the whole country being infested with their guerrillas, a strong guard was necessary to protect this section, and keep our communications open. A train of two hundred and ten wagons, protected by a strong escort of infantry, and laden with provisions and supplies for the corps, reached here on yesterday evening. Gen. THOMAS, with his division, is at Gallatin. This will relieve our forces, a part of which has been on post duty there for several days, and enable our corps to push forward.

One of the most serious difficulties in the way of our advance is the keeping up of communication by the Louisville Railroad, which is assailable at many points to the rebel cavalry and guerrillas. This road will have to be kept open at whatever cost, and a strong force will have to be detailed from more active service for post guards along its most important points.

The rebels, in what force it is not accurately ascertained, have again reinstated Northeastern Kentucky, and are depredating upon the people in the counties of Bath and Montgomery, and in the vicinity of Mount Sterling. A party of two hundred of them made a dash upon Stanford, in Lincoln County, a few days since, but were repulsed by a body of Home Guards before much mischief was done. There has also been a report prevailing that the rebel Gen. WHEELER, with a considerable force, was advancing upon Murfreesboro, for the purpose of again destroying railroad communication between Louisville and Bowling Green. This report, however, is positively denied by a gentleman from that section with whom I have just conversed.

The twenty of the Michigan cavalry who were captured near the Hermitage, and of which mention was made in my letter from that place, are highly censured by those in command here. They were strongly posted, and could have successfully resisted their assailants and maintained their ground; yet they suffered themselves to be taken completely by surprise while eating their breakfast, and surrendered without any effort at defence. Yesterday forty more of our men were taken by the rebels near Gallatin, for or seven miles of our camp. They were on the Gallatin road, in small squads, when they were fired upon by some Tennessee and Kentucky brigade. The captures and losses of our men are becoming quite frequent, so much so, that suspicion is obtaining that many of them rather like to be paroled. Recently a day passed without some of our men being taken prisoners from Mitchelville or other of the outposts.

The rebels have not been permitted to have quiet of the other hostile elements with which they have to contend. Their inhuman conscription law has been enforced with the utmost rigidity and without regard to age in this region of country. During a recent raid in one of the adjacent neighborhoods, the most revolting operations were observed among the poorer class. One family we stopped a third time while the mother, a decrepid of a crippled woman and five young women, utterly destitute and dependent, one of whom had been dragged to the army by the conscription law, but some had been taken, and for some imprisoned to rebel rule. Other families were visited, whose only protectors had been conscripted from their homes and hurried to Mechanicsville, the rendezvous for the conscripts. Contrasting with this wretchedness are the lordly aristocrats of the country, who brought about this war, and whose [illegible] disgusting sire taint the very atmosphere with [illegible]. Several of these minor rebels were [illegible] Motes, contemptuously [illegible] "[illegible] shinplasters," as they term them, and denounce Southern currency. Southern currency and shinplasters are freely taken here for provisions, chickens, eggs, and such articles as many of us wish to purchase, but which are not found in the regular list of army rations. The "Order No. 10" issued by that arch traitor, Isham G. Harris, which I send you, will show to some extent how [illegible] are oppressed by the enforcement of our conscription act.

Reports from Rebeldom, which are entitled to weight, are to the effect that the rebels are falling back from Murfreesboro toward Chattanooga, and that they will mass their forces at that place in the vicinity, for the purpose of resisting Gen. ROSECRANS. A gentleman who lives near Murfreesboro, and whom I conversed to-day, states that any number of army of Russ has been ordered to Virginia, and that it is daily being rushed eastward to join Gen. LEE at Richmond.

A new order and enthusiasm has been infused into this army by the accession of Gen. ROSECRANS to the leadership. Gen. ROSECRANS has opened [illegible] with vigor and in terrible earnestness. Before long the Louisville and Nashville Road will be opened and the Cumberland River will be up, and then we will sweep through "Dixie" with the rapidity and irresistible avalanche. Already the Brigades of Generals NEGLEY and PALMER have left Nashville for Murfreesboro. They will be speedily followed by others. Heavy cannonading was heard for some hours yesterday, in the direction of Nashville. We have not learned what was the occasion of it. Nov. 18.

Heavy cannonading was heard during the night apparently near Rural Hill, eight miles south of this point. This morning the firing is heard with redoubled vigor. The Fourteenth Brigade, supported by cavalry, was thrown forward to Rural Hill on the 16th. The probabilities are that they have encountered the enemy, and that some fighting is going on. We shall soon learn the particulars. CORRESPONDENT.

P. S.—As I close the firing is very rapid and heavy. H.

THE REBEL CONSCRIPTION.

GENERAL ORDER NO. 10.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, MURFREESBORO, Oct. 13, 1862.

1. The Confederate authorities having ordered the enforcement of the Conscription law in Tennessee, the Judge or Chairman of the County Court of —— County, will immediately appoint a reliable and competent person in each civil district in said County, to make an enrollment of all persons in their respective districts who are subject to the provisions of an act of Congress approved April 16, 1862, entitled "An Act to further provide for the public defense." Said enrolling officers will proceed immediately to make the enrollment under said act of Congress, to continue daily to enroll from the hour the Court adjourns, and return the rolls to the Superintendent of Conscript camps in Middle Tennessee at Hillsborough, at which place a rendezvous is hereby established for conscripts and volunteers to fill the Tennessee regiments now in the service.

2. Said enrolling officers will, at the same time, enroll all persons in their respective districts who are over thirty-five and under forty-five years of age, and all persons who are over forty-five and under fifty-five years of age, and formed separate lists of them, together with a duplicate list of those who are over eighteen and under thirty-five, to be filed in the office of the State. They will also make a list of those persons in their respective districts who have long in the service, but who are absent from their battalions or regiments, with the names of their commands, and return the same to the Adjutant-General of the State.

3. At any time within thirty days from this date all persons may volunteer and select the regiment in which they will be attached, either before or at the time of enrollment.

4. All persons volunteering to fill up the regiments already in the service will report themselves at the above rendezvous, where they will be mustered into service, and furnished transportation to their respective regiments. By order of

ISHAM G. HARRIS, Governor, &c.

W. C. WHITHORNE, Adjutant General.

IMPORTANT FROM NASHVILLE.

News of Rebel Movements—Gen. Jos. Johnston in Command of Bragg's Army—The Enemy Concentrating at Murfreesboro for a Fight.

NASHVILLE, TENN., Tuesday, Nov. 18.

The Murfreesboro Banner of the 16th states that Jos. JOHNSTON will assume command of Bragg's army. Gen. E. CARYNGTON has been released from arrest and reported for duty. MCCLAIN has been assigned to the defence of Cumberland Gap.

The Banner reports heavy skirmishing at Lavergne on the 14th.

The railroad line to Huntsville, Alabama, has been reopened.

The Banner says there is great demand for Gen. BRAGG in East Tennessee. Some County Court clerks are fractious in enforcing the Conscription law, and his Excellency is needed to set them right.

BRAGG issues a general order "Headquarters, Nov. 3, near Nashville, 1862." It is supposed from this that he is with FARRAGUT at Lavergne. The order is signed JOHN WHITING, Brig.-Gen., Chief of Staff.

A dispatch from Richmond, 17th, states the occupation of Fredericksburgh a feint on Gen. BURNSIDE's part.

A person who left Chattanooga on the 15th, and has arrived here, says an immense force of rebels are marching North. HARDEE's corps would move up to Murfreesboro. He states that the rebels intended to fight at Murfreesboro.

NASHVILLE, Wednesday, Nov. 19.

Sixty paroled rebel officers and soldiers took the oath of allegiance to-day voluntarily, as did also a number of rebel citizens.

Fifty paroled National officers and soldiers who had surrendered in a cowardly manner to the rebels, at different times, were marched through the streets dressed in night-caps, and sent to Camp Chase.

RAILROAD COMMUNICATION.

LOUISVILLE, Wednesday, Nov. 19.

Railroad communication between Louisville and Nashville is now complete. A train left here yesterday morning, and arrived at Nashville the same evening.

A CHAPTER OF DIPLOMATIC HISTORY.

National Issues—The Fisheries.

BY EDWARD EVERETT.

From the New-York Ledger.

In an issue of the London Times for last [illegible] there was an article written with considerable care, to enforce the liberty of the English Press, which [illegible] the United States to [illegible]. That article served for some [illegible] back for the public good [illegible] offer it was found that [illegible] without any [illegible] on the part of the Government [illegible] the severity of [illegible] the point of that country toward this, and [illegible] against us, in order to average [illegible] more tied, pretended affronts to [illegible] they had submitted while [illegible] free. Among the items of [illegible] is that article is the following: "We were treated with much reticence [illegible] the fisheries of Nova Scotia." [illegible] speaks of the difficulty of framing an indictment against a whole people, and if this be [illegible] difficulty in pleading to such an indictment [illegible] "rude treatment" [illegible] set forth, and, as the [illegible] say, we may well echo the words of [illegible] "do not know the method" of [illegible] such a charge.

[illegible] the rights of the citizens of the United States to carry on their fisheries in the waters which the coast of the British Provinces [illegible] by the treaty of 1783 and the [illegible] of 1818. Before the war of 1812 American [illegible] were occasionally captured for exercising the liberty of the treaty of 1783, and after the convention of 1818, they were at different [illegible] seized, for pursuing their avocation within the bays from which, as was maintained in the [illegible], they were excluded by that instrument. These seizures were no doubt sometimes justifiable; they were sometimes (at least we thought so) unjustifiable; in many of the cases the vessels on inquiry were released, and sometimes the case was doubtful. The individual cases [illegible] from time to time the subject of friendly and temperate correspondence between the two [illegible] which have passed into capacity [illegible] on either side. The chief difference between the two Governments, as far as any principle was involved, was on the question whether the United States fishermen should be allowed to approach, in all places, within three miles of the shore; or whether a line should be drawn from headland to headland across the coast, which line was not to be approached within three miles. The former was the American, the latter was the British interpretation of the treaty. The latter of the Convention of 1818 favored the British interpretation, because it [illegible] "the liberty heretofore claimed and exercised of taking, dry, or cure fish on or within three marine miles of any of the coasts, bays, creeks, or harbors of His Britannic Majesty's dominions in America," not included within certain limits. The spirit of the Convention, and for a long time the usage under it, were in favor of the American claim, which was that, provided our fishermen did not come nearer than three marine miles of the shore, it was not intended that they should be excluded from such great arms of the sea as the Bay of Fundy and the Bay of Chaleurs, which, though called bays in maps and works of geography, could not for various reasons have been referred to in the Convention, among "the coasts, bays, creeks and harbors," from which we were to be shut out.

The provincial Government, at all times from natural causes unfriendly to the United States, urged the strict construction of the convention, and passed laws of the most severe and stringent character to enforce their understanding of it. The home Government rather leaned to the liberal construction, and as I have intimated, the correspondence was at all times temperate and amicable. The construction of the convention was a principal topic of discussion between Lord Aberdeen and myself, and though, following the opinion of the law-officers of the Crown, he insisted, as a matter of right, on the strict construction, he agreed in March, 1854, so far to relax it in practice as to allow our fishermen to enter the Bay of Fundy. As the same reasons applied to all the other great bays, I have no doubt that the concession (as Great Britain regarded it) would soon have extended to them. In fact, I had a right to infer this from various informal intimations of Lord Aberdeen. The provincial authorities, however, took the alarm, and expressed so much discontent at the opening of the Bay of Fundy, and such vehement disgust at the idea of further relaxation, that nothing further was done until the general reciprocity arrangement of 5th June, 1854.

During all these transactions, as far as I am aware, not a word rising even to warmth passed between the Governments of the United States and Great Britain, though the treatment of our fishermen by the provincial authorities was in many cases most arbitrary and even cruel. There was a short flurry in 1852, when a considerable British naval force was ordered to the fishing-grounds, and, under the impression that some violent course was intended toward our fishermen, Commodore Perry was sent up for their protection. The intercourse of the naval officers on both sides was most amicable, and the affair blew over with friendly explanations between the Governments, soon followed by the reciprocity treaty. This is the occasion, I suppose, when, according to the above cited article, "Great Britain was treated with much rudeness on the question as to the fisheries of Nova Scotia." There are, however, two opinions on which side, if on either, the "rudeness" lay. A gentleman, whose authority will, perhaps, at the present time be respected in England, Mr. Senator Mason, then Chairman of the Committee of Foreign Relations in the Senate of the United States, expressed himself as follows on the subject:

"And supposed in this civilized age, and between two such countries as Great Britain and the United States, that, under the pretence of England to revive her construction of the Convention, and require that the United States Government, national courtesy would have required that notice should have been given of the determination on the part of Great Britain to enforce such construction. Sir, on the contrary, the first information that reaches us is, that Great Britain has ordered into these seas a large naval force, for the purpose of enforcing this disputed right. I know not to what light it may strike Senators, but it strikes me as a far higher offence than a breach of national courtesy—as one of insult [illegible] American people."

So deep was the feeling of the patriotic Senator on the subject, that he was led to say further: "If there be official or satisfactory information to the Executive, that this extraordinary naval armament has been ordered by Great Britain into North American seas for the purpose of executing insanely the construction which Great Britain places on the Convention, I say the American people will demand of those Executive, that all the forces of the home Government shall be spared there instantly, to protect American fishermen. * * * If I may be told there is liability of collision, I would answer at once there is liability to peace if there were, if it becomes the Executive instantly to present that, which can be only looked upon as an indignity and insult to the Nation."

In the progress of the correspondence between the two Governments on the construction of the treaty, a proposition occurred, well calculated, one would think, to draw our brethren beyond the water a little distrust of the official opinions by which they are accustomed to fortify their claims on foreign Powers, and a little charity in their comments on the opposite statements of foreign Governments. In March, 1841, Mr. Andrew Stevenson, at that time our Minister in London, addressed a note to Lord Palmerston, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, complaining of the manner in which American fishermen had been interfered with in the colonial waters. This note was communicated by Lord Palmerston to the Lieutenant-Governor of Nova-Scotia, that the validity of the complaints might be inquired into. Lord Palmerston sent back to the home Government "a case," which had been prepared by the Assembly of Nova Scotia, in order to obtain the official opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown on the various points at issue in reference to the construction of the convention of 1818. The second point in the case was stated as follows:

"Have American citizens the right, under that Convention, to enter any of the bays of this Province to take fish, if, after they have so entered, they prosecute the fishery more than three marine miles from the shores of any of the bays, creeks, or harbors, in which they may be found, or at any other place in the open bay, more than three marine miles from the shore?"

The Law Officers of the Crown, at that time, were Sir John Dodson, well known as the editor of the "Third Series of Sir William Scott's Decisions in Admiralty," and Sir Thomas Wilde, afterwards Lord Truro and Lord Chief-Justice of the Court of Common Pleas; and still later Lord High Chancellor of England. The case was submitted to them on the 30th of July, 1841, and their answer was returned on the 30th of August, [illegible] days, commencing on the 7th. The British steamer Avon had to keep her passengers for Lima on board till the 9th, and was obliged to proceed to Greytown to land her mails, without discharging her cargo for Aspinwall. But little damage was done to wharves and shipping.

The United States naval corvette Lancaster and the United States sloop-of-war St. Mary's are at Panama. The United States steamship Warren, at Panama, has been condemned, and her stores landed. The Lancaster will soon go south. The United States brig Bainbridge, Lieutenant Commander Lynch, arrived at Aspinwall, twenty-eight days from Key West, on the 11th. The United States brig Perry, Lieutenant Commander Nawcom, sailed from Aspinwall for Key West yesterday.

Dr. Hazen, of the State Department, Washington, from his mission to the South Pacific, returns to New-York to-day. He has visited Peru, Bolivia and Chili, and has received everywhere the most flattering attentions from the principal statesmen, as well as from private persons of note.

SOUTH AND CENTRAL AMERICA.

Agitation in Ecuador—Gen. San Roman Installed President of Peru—His Cabinet—Commercial News—Affairs in Bolivia and Chili.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Panama, Saturday, Nov. 15, 1862.

By the British steamship Callao, which arrived at Panama from South American ports on the 8th inst., we have dates from Valparaiso to the 19th, Bolivia to the 22d, Callao to the 29th October, and Paita to Nov. 1.

The Panama Railroad Company's steamship Salvador arrived at Panama same day, having sailed from San José de Guatemala on the 25th October. She has dates from Salvador to the 26th, and Nicaragua to the 30th October, and from Costa Rica to Nov. 1.

The Callao brought $299,405 90 in specie, 1,521 bales cotton, (156 pounds to the bale,) 807 bales wool, &c., for England; and only 84 bales goods, principally goat skins, for New-York.

The Guatemala brought $6,561 25 for England and Panama, and the following cargo:

For Southampton—144 cerrones indigo, 94 cerrones cochineal, 2 bales deerskins.

For Liverpool—2 cerrones indigo.

For South-Pacific—4 mats and one canal, 179 cerrones and 3 bags indigo, 2 parcels cochineal.

For Aspinwall—3 cerrones indigo, 1 parcel samples, 6 bags coffee.

For New-York—7 bags coffee, 36 bales deerskins, 16 cerrones cochineal, 2 cerrones indigo, 2 bales canvas, 2,220 hides.

For Panama—2 cans balsam, 19 cerrones indigo, 1 cerron cochineal, 1 bale deerskins, 12 cases cigars, 25 packages sugar.

The news from either section is of no great importance.

ECUADOR.

This little State has been much agitated and frightened latterly at reports of attempted fillibuster invasions from Peru, and of contemplated revolutions and conspiracies against the authority of President Moreno and Gen. Franco, his military chief. The Government at Quito had addressed notes to all the diplomatic representatives at the Capital, deploring any attempt at unlawful or irregular invasion of the country, to which they had replied in the same strain. I notice that official replies are published from both the representative of Gen. Mosquera and from the agent of the extinct government of New-Granada, from which it appears that Ecuador recognizes both our contending parties.

PERU.

From Lima we learn that Gen. San Roman was quietly installed as President of the Republic, on the 24th of October, in place of Gen. Castilla, the latter having served since he overthrew Gen. Echenique, in 1855. Gen. Castilla published patriotic addresses to the nation and to the navy when he retired, and President San Roman, in two addresses to the nation and the army, promises to govern strictly under the Constitution and laws, and to retrench the expenses of the Government. President San Roman called Gen. Manuel Mendiburu to take charge of the portfolios of the War and Navy Departments, charging him to organize the Cabinet as President of the Council of Ministers. This gentleman, however, finally threw up the attempt to form a Cabinet, for the reason that one of the persons whom he had proposed to associate with him declined the place assigned him. On the 26th, Don Jose Gregorio Paz Soldan succeeded Gen. Mendiburu, associating with himself as Minister of the Government, Don Antonio Arenas; Minister of Finance, Don Jose Santos Castañeda; Minister of Justice, Don Melchor Vivanco; Minister of War, Gen. Isidro Falsuneche. The Government, after a great deal of public and private discussion, has finally accepted the $11,000,000 loan lately made in England, and which, after a portion of the money had arrived in Lima, Congress refused to sanction, on the ground that the loan and conversion of the old debt was made in London by the Peruvian Minister without due authority, and was an onerous one for the Government. Don Pedro Galvez, Secretary of Hacienda, having refused to sign the decree accepting the loan, he resigned, and was succeeded by Señor Mendiburu, Chief Comptroller of the Exchequer, who was more pliant. The usual scandal in such matters is circulated in Lima, that Galvez refused to approve the loan because he had his pet scheme by which he could better fill his own pockets, and that Mendiburu did sign it because he got $200,000 for doing so. How this may be I know not, but I do know that in an $11,000,000 operation in Peru a good deal of the money is expected to stick to the palms of the Government officers. £500,000 of the money is deposited in Lima, awaiting the news of its acceptance to reach England.

The gross amount received from the export of guano during the biennial term that has just expired, is $61,202,000 50.

The importations into Peru in 1860, just reported, $15,420,105. The exports, $35,076,834. Of the exports, $6,619,266 went to England; $3,508,969 to France; $1,124,960 to Hamburg; $1,141,253 to the United States.

On the 16th, the American ship Inspector, in going from Callao to the Chincha Islands, came in contact with a British vessel, and both were slightly injured. The Inspector returned to Callao for repairs.

The papers here publish accounts of shipwrecks of American, Italian and other vessels in the late tempest on the Southern coast; the facts concerning all of which, except one British, sent to you for your marine report to-day, were mentioned in my last.

Peruvian agents were endeavoring to charter vessels for guano to Europe at £3, but without success.

BOLIVIA.

La Paz, the principal city of Bolivia, finally surrendered to Gen. Acha, Provisional President, on the 16th of October, Gen. Acasna, commanding there for the revolutionary leader Frasa, retiring. For twenty days, previously, not a shop had been opened in the city, and the distress among many was getting to be very great. Four or five mercantile houses only were sacked during the disturbances. Frasa had fled, some say, to the Argentine Confederation, while others aver that he is still in the country, organizing for another attempt. At any rate, there is but little prospect for permanent rest, there are so many personal and political aspirations to satisfy in the country.

The colonization scheme (of American contrabands) of Mr. Casseus, United States Minister Resident in Bolivia, was considered a failure.

CHILI.

Congress was still in session. In the House of [illegible] At the [illegible] pursuit to place [illegible] of the [illegible] upon which a servant of Mr. Maury, late United States Consul, here it down, and doing the flag up into a ball, threw it into the face of accosts. A fight followed, which was so long continued and carried on with so much [illegible] that the police had to be called in to restore order.

In Aspinwall, the sea in the harbor was pretty rough for three or four days, commencing on the 7th. The British steamer Avon had to keep her passengers for Lima on board till the 9th, and was obliged to proceed to Greytown to land her mails, without discharging her cargo for Aspinwall. But little damage was done to wharves and shipping.

CHILI.

Congress was still in session. In the House of [illegible] had been referred to the King of the Belgians for arbitration, would soon be arranged. He also denied that the Chilian Minister had been received uncourteously at the Court of St. James.

Nineteen States had been represented upon cotton and cotton goods. Glazed cotton, which paid 35 per cent ad valorem, or one cent per yard, now pays same on a valuation of 21c. Unglazed cotton is free. Plain brown cotton shirtings, before assessed at 6½ cents per yard, are raised to 8½ cents. Thread, valued at 9 cents, are now valued at 10½ cents; those at 12½ cents, to 15½ cents; those at 9 cents, to 8½ cents; those at 10 cents to 11½ cents; those at 11½ cents to 13 cents. These pay 35 per cent. Cotton drillings, formerly rated at 15 cents, are now placed at 17½ cents; 20½ cents to 23 cents. Brown cotton goods, formerly rated at 15 cents, are now rated 20 cents. Carolina rice is now rated at 2c. 40 per quintal, instead of 2c.

Business has improved the past fortnight. Large transactions were effected in foreign goods. The flour market has been brisk. The last advices from England had also given some encouragement to the cotton interests, which had been much depressed. Money was easy, and interest low on good paper. Stocks at American options are held for higher rates. All the goods have largely advanced in price. Wool-ens and linens are also higher. No Carolina rice in market. American refined sugar, 10,000 crushed, sold at 22 75@23 2c. The American sugar by the Adriatic sold at 21½c. 6 p. The stock of all kinds on hand is only 160,000 arobas. The imports of the year amount to 445,000 arobas. Two cargoes of pine lumber from California, of 750,000 feet, were sold for delivery on board vessels at from $30@$32 50, six months. Barley has advanced to $2@2 12½, and lately small lots have gone as high as $2 50 ⅌ fanega. Peas are entertained at a small price. Flour has advanced; sales of Southern closed as high as $4 ⅌ quintal, six months. Copper is held at $16 12. Exchange on London, 60 and 90 days, 44@45½ pence ⅌ dollar. Freights to England and Hamburg, £2@£3 5s., to the United States, $15.

ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.

From Rosario dates are up to Sept. 18. The Provinces are all quiet; but at Buenos Ayres the people were a good deal agitated about the question as to the place for the permanent location of the Capital. The local Legislature had rejected the bill for the federalization of the Province (?) of Buenos Ayres, or that for the municipal area of the city. The public mind was restless at the new turn of affairs.

Coal, said to be superior to the coal of Coplapo, has been found in the Province of San Juan. This Province has rich silver mines.

The American schooner Eliza Jones, Capt. John Ambrans, was lost in the Gulf of St. Matbis, coast of Patagonia, while engaged in seal fishing. The crew—19 in number—were saved, and after traveling 54 miles without wood or water, arrived at the mouth of the Rio Negro, where they were well treated. The vessel, which was driven on shore, had been sold as she lay.

CENTRAL AMERICA.

All the Central American States are quiet. Fears are still entertained that trouble will grow out of the late Presidential election in Nicaragua.

In Guatemala the Government offers prizes for five years more on the production of coffee and sugar. In 1861 the amount of coffee exported from Guatemala was only 5,249 quintals, while in the first nine months of this year it reached 22,657 quintals.

In Costa Rica the elections for President will take place in December. There are eight candidates, but it is expected Señor Volio will be elected.

The Costa Rica coffee crop will probably exceed 100,000 quintals. In San José advance sales were making at $10 per quintal—equal to $12 50 on the coast—or say $11 50 United States Gold.

BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

Nomination Rejected—Portrait of Gen. McClellan—The City Inspector's Opinion of the Street-Cleaning Contract—Wages Increased in the Croton Department—A Donation of $50,000 Proposed.

The Board of Aldermen met at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The Mayor sent in the name of Leonard G. Carpenter for Street Commissioner. It was rejected by 10 to 2.

A resolution, by Mr. Mitchell, to procure a portrait of Gen. McClellan, to be placed in the Governor's Room, and appropriating $1,000 for the purpose, was laid over.

Col. Delevan, the City Inspector, replied at length to the resolution inquiring why the street-cleaning has been neglected lately, and if any legal steps had been taken to compel the contractor to do his duty. The Colonel attributes to unfavorable weather and the strikes of the sweepers the recent neglect. The first of these causes, he thinks, must necessarily interfere with the progress of the work occasionally, and the other cause, Dowlerson & Co.—the parties to whom Hackley transferred the contract—have taken all reasonable means to avert, but so far with only indifferent success. The contract itself is at fault, as the obstruction in most cases of neglect, because it does not contain provisions summarily enforcing its faithful fulfillment. The conditions apparently designed to accomplish this are insufficient for the purpose, and allow the contractor to slight the work for a period of six months before he can be obliged to perform it thoroughly or suffer a reversion of the job to the direction of the City authorities. Appeals to the Corporation Counsel for advice in the matter have thus far failed to elicit from that official any suggestion to extricate the City from its embarrassment; therefore, Col. Delavan concludes, the devising of some plan of relief from the trouble caused by the imperfections of the contract, rests with the Common Council.

The communication was referred to the committee on Public Health.

A report from the Committee on Finance, in favor of donating $50,000 towards the expense of constructing a new Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum, was laid over under the rule.

Concurrence was had on the resolution increasing the wages of the caulkers and laborers in the Croton Department—the former to $2, and the latter to $1.75 per day.

The Board adjourned till Wednesday next, at 1 o'clock P. M.

The Up-town Movement.

When a noted restaurateur changed his base to Fourteenth-street, it was generally thought that he had penetrated too far into the enemy's country; the supplies might be cut; it was a rash experiment, not warranted on sound military principles. His Summer campaign, however, has been a brilliant success, and what better proof could we demand of good generalship? Wallack was the first among managers to perceive the advantage of an up-town stand. Three-fourths of those who patronize this class of theatre reside above Union-square. He has been amply rewarded for his sagacity and enterprise, as his houses night after night fully testify.

A. T. Stewart, not slow to see the course things were taking, has installed himself on the corner of Tenth-street and Broadway, and though he has not half as much room as he could use advantageously, the change will secure to him at least one-third of the retail dry goods business previously done by other stores situated between Canal and Tenth streets. The Broadway railroad, to be in operation by the 1st of January, will turn four-fifths of the travel which Broadway pours into Union-square down Fourteenth-street and up Fifth-avenue. No pedestrian—no carriage—will voluntarily continue up Broadway, in its cumbered as it is with rails, when they can go up an admirably paved avenue—the finest thoroughfare in the City. In fact, this movement has already taken place, and Fifth-avenue above Fourteenth-street is now the centre of the polite travel of the City. The Clubs are all here, and it will not be long before its elegant houses will be turned into fine stores. Even now, we understand that parties are in search of a site for a theatre on the avenue, between Fourteenth and Twenty-third streets. Below Fourteenth would not do; everything is dead; no movement, no passage. A theatre in the desired situation would undoubtedly enjoy a larger share of public patronage than any other locality above Union-square could command. Fifth-avenue is quickly to be the Rue de la Paix—the Regent-street—of New-York.

The Revolutionary Veterans.

At a meeting of the Veteran Corps of 1776, held at the Armory, Nov. 25, 1862, the following pre-[illegible] Corps be taken, in acknowledgment of this especial honor and marked respect conferred upon them; and to it be [illegible]

Resolved, That in the very beautiful collation spread for the refreshment of the members, upon that occasion, this Company recognizes another act giving to the courtesy of the ladies, goodness of heart, and to the [illegible] Corps.

Resolved, That these resolutions, signed by the officers, be published in the New-York Times, and a copy of the same be presented to Mrs. Sarah Richards, recorded in Mrs. Sarah Richards.

Richard Raynor, President.

Samuel Bowne, First Lieutenant; Henry Barker, Second Lieutenant; Caleb Ammerman, Third Lieutenant; J. R. Wilson, Fourth Lieutenant.

Court of General Sessions.

[illegible]

In this Court yesterday, Daniel L. Wales was placed on trial, under an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences. It appeared from the evidence adduced by the prosecution that the prisoner had been an employee of Mr. White, the complainant, in connection with the week system of that establishment, presented himself on Saturday evening at the office of the Cashier to receive his weekly wages. The number of days that each hand worked during the week, it seems, is left to the over-[illegible] and the superintendent, on stepping up to the Cashier's office, merely uttered the words "five days," and was thereupon paid five days' wages by the Cashier. Immediately after making the payment, the Cashier said he suspected all was not right, and on inquiry at the yard, ascertained that the prisoner had not worked at all that week. Mr. Pearson, counsel for the prisoner, claimed that under the law, as laid down in Bishop's Criminal Law, the defendant was entitled to an acquittal, if the jury should find that, in the transaction, the prisoner was guilty of no more than a civil wrong, in not exercising that ordinary caution which the law requires of every business man. The Court took the same view of the case, and without proceeding any further in the trial, instructed the jury to acquit the prisoner of not guilty. This the jury refused to do, or at least two of their number declined to obey the instructions of the Court. Under these circumstances the Court informed them that they should be locked up together, and intimated that they would be permitted to remain together until after Thanksgiving unless they could agree. This was not a very pleasing prospect to the refractory jurors, and after being out nearly minutes they compromised the matter by agreeing to the following verdict: "Not guilty, according to the instructions of the Court." The jury were then discharged for the term, and the Court adjourned to Friday morning at 11 o'clock.

The Banks Expedition.

Public expectation is on tiptoe for the departure of the great expedition to be commanded by Major-Gen. N. P. Banks. Meanwhile, as unostentatiously as the New-Yorkers will permit, the General is busy with his preparations. The troops and supplies are gathering at a convenient point. And any fine morning the public may be startled with the information that the great armada is afloat. Let us hope that it will prove favorable to American arms, and that it may reach the heart of the rebellion.

Naval.

IMPORTANT TO PRIZE CAPTORS.

Through the especial favor of an official in Washington, we are enabled to state that the persons entitled to prize money on the following captured vessels may now apply for it, as the lists have been received at Washington:

| Captured by | Name of Prize | Total amount |
|---|---|---|
| U. S. Union | Hattie Jackson | $1,203 27 |
| U. S. Oneida | Eugenia | 12,668 42 |
| U. S. Oneida | President | 1,360 60 |

The following is a form of receipt if the applicant is a warrant or commissioned officer:

Received, this 27th day of November, 1862, of S. F. Brown, Navy Agent, at Washington, one hundred dollars ——cents, in full for my share of prize money as a Lieutenant on board the United States vessel Union, in the year 1862, being for captures made by said vessel during that period.

$100. [Name the prize or prizes.]

OFFICIAL.

A duplicate must be forwarded.

Henceforth the lists of prizes sent to Washington will be printed in this department when furnished, so that applicants need not trouble themselves to write beforehand.

THE NAVY-YARD.

Proposals for building a house at the Naval Hospital, New-York, will be received at the Bureau of Yards and Docks, until the 23d December next. The plans for this building are in the hands of the Civil Engineer, and may be seen by interested parties at the Brooklyn Navy-yard. The house in question is for the use of the Surgeon.

The Passaic left the Navy-yard yesterday, amid the plaudits of the crews of the different ships in the stream.

THE PACIFIC SQUADRON.

The following changes are reported in the Pacific Squadron:

The Commander-in-Chief, Commodore Charles H. Bell, has been honored with the title of Rear Admiral. Commodore Henry K. Hoff, who commanded the flagship Lancaster during her recent visit to California, has gone to the East, and is succeeded in the command of the Lancaster by Capt. Joseph Lanman, recently Ordnance Officer at the Mare Island Navy-yard. Capt. Charles H. Poor has been ordered to take command of the Savannah, vice Capt. Lanman, ordered to the Lancaster. The following Lieutenants in the Squadron have been promoted to Lieutenant-Commanders: Paul Shirley, of the St. Mary's; Geo. W. Young, of the Wyoming; Andrew W. Johnson, of the Savannah; Francis H. Baker, of the Narragansett; Wm. R. Fitzhugh, of the Cyane; Lieut. William K. Brown, U. S. Marines, has joined the Lancaster, to supply the place vacated by the death of Lieut. Henry Barrandon Hoff, who died at sea, on board the flagship, Aug. 17, 1862.

NEW-JERSEY.

Railroad Communication with Bloomfield, N. J.—The citizens of Bloomfield, and Montclair, N. J., wearied with, and disgusted at, the constant delays to which they have been subjected at Newark, through the mismanagement of the Morris and Essex Railroad Company, held a meeting in the Bloomfield depôt, on Tuesday evening, to take some action which should call attention to their grievances, and, if possible, secure them redress. Mr. Wilson P. Corwin called the meeting to order, and on his motion Mr. Robert M. Hedges, of Montclair, was called to preside. After spirited speeches by Messrs. Praed, Hall, Dodge, M. W. Dong, and others, a series of resolutions was adopted declaring the delays a source of great inconvenience, and detrimental alike to the interests of the Newark and Bloomfield Railroad and to those of the community, for whose accommodation it was built, asserting that the growing importance of the section of country represented in the meeting not only justified but demanded increased communication and more rapid communication with New-York, and urging direct communication without change of cars, as the proper remedy for existing difficulties. A committee of seven, consisting of Messrs. R. H. Frost, Henry Mason, Wright, E. Condon, H. J. Mills, G. B. Gibson, R. M. Hedges, and James C. Veach, was then appointed to confer with the Directors of the Newark and Bloomfield Railroad Company, and to pledge them a hearty support in any liberal policy which would promote the interests of the road as well as those of the public. The meeting adjourned to meet at the call of the committee.

Horse-Car Railroads in Newark.—It is probable a few months hence will find Newark as well supplied with horse-car railroads as any city of its size in the country. The Newark and Orange Company have their line in running order to Orange, and are doing a flourishing business. The same Company have an extension of their road to the line between Newark and Clinton Township nearly completed, and contemplate an extension to Irvington. They are also constructing a track up Broad-street to the Belleville line, to run ultimately to the latter village. The Newark and Pompton Turnpike Company give notice of an application to the next Legislature for an act to authorize them to abandon that part of their turnpike between Newark and West Bloomfield, and lay rails for horse-cars over the same. The completion of these several lines of road will be a great benefit both to Newark and the beautiful suburban towns thus placed in rapid and easy communication with it.

Soldiers' Thanksgiving Dinner.—Great preparations are being made by the lady visitors in the United States Hospitals at Centre and Market streets, Newark, to give the soldiers a Thanksgiving dinner, on Friday, the 28th inst. Donations have been already received ample for the purpose. It is expected the dinner will be a grand affair. At the main hospital, at Centre-street, the officers will have a Thanksgiving dinner in their private dining-room. A large number of distinguished guests, among whom are Gens. Scott and McClellan, Gov. Olden, Gen. Frazer, (Governor elected New-Jersey,) and others have been invited.

Resignation.—Rev. J. Hoyer, D. D., the eloquent and popular rector of Trinity Church, Newark, has resigned his charge, owing to continued ill health. He united yesterday in the cheerful, from Boston, for Europe.

THE CITY GOVERNMENT.

BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

STATED SESSION—Wednesday, Nov. 17, 1862.

PRESENT—John T. Hoey, President, pro tem. Aldermen Walsh, Hall, Reed, Mitchell, Degnon, Jeremiah, Fullman, Boole, Allen, Cornell, Parker.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The President being absent, and no one being present, Alderman Farley, Alderman Jeremiah was called to the Chair.

Alderman Boole moved that when this Board adjourns, it do adjourn to meet on Wednesday, the third day of December, at one o'clock P. M.

Which was carried.

PETITIONS.

By Alderman Allen—

Petition of the Bloomingdale Baptist Church for remission of assessment.

Referred to Committee on Assessments.

By the same—

Petition of Hannah Tompkins to have county paid a claim against the City.

Referred to Comptroller, with power.

MESSAGE FROM HIS HONOR THE MAYOR.

The Private Secretary of the Mayor then announced the following communication, which was read:

CITY OF NEW-YORK, Nov. 17, 1862.

To the Honorable the Board of Aldermen:

GENTLEMEN:

I hereby nominate Leonard G. Carpenter, Esq., for Street Commissioner of this City.

GEORGE OPDYKE, Mayor.

The question being put on the confirmation of said nomination,

The same was lost on a division, viz:

Affirmative—Aldermen Hall, Degnon, Jeremiah, Fullman, Boole, Allen, Cornell, Parker—10.

Also, a Message transmitting communication from the widow of the late Brig.-Gen. Thomas Williams, acknowledging the receipt of testimonial of respect to her husband.

Which was received and ordered on file.

RESOLUTIONS.

By Alderman Walsh—

Resolved, That the Comptroller be and is hereby directed to advertise for and purchase a new Engine for Hose Company Number Fifty, within the following bounds, to wit, Mott, Bayard, Bowery and Chatham streets, which was referred to Committee on Fire Department.

By Alderman Boole—

Resolved, That permission be and the same is hereby given to Hugh Mangan to erect and maintain a stoop in front of his premises number one hundred and fifty-one Fifth Ave., the same to be made according to the Revised Ordinances of the City of New-York.

Which was adopted.

By Alderman Mitchell—

Resolved, That the Committee on Arts and Sciences be directed to inquire into the propriety of the City purchasing of George E. McClellan, for the sum of one thousand dollars, the same is having commenced thereon.

Which was laid over.

REPORTS.

Alderman Parker, from the Committee on Finance, presented the following report in favor of donating the Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum the sum of fifty thousand dollars, to be applied toward the erection of a new Orphan Asylum:

The Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the Memorial of the Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum of the City of New-York, for aid from the municipal authorities of this City to enable them to construct a new, enlarged and improved asylum building in close proximity to the premises now occupied by them, respectfully

REPORT:

That an investigation of the claims of the present petitioners upon the revenue of the City, appears of more than ordinary scrutiny, has resulted in finding great importance, taken in connection with the public duty of properly caring for the present and future children of the most helpless of all dependent creatures—the orphan.

The asylums under the control and management of the petitioners, the five of which, located in Fourth-ward, were opened in one thousand eight hundred and twenty-five, are models of cleanliness, order, system, and are marked by the exercise of the strictest economy in

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

The steamship Africa arrived at Halifax yesterday, and in addition to the summary of her news telegraphed from Cape Race, we have now come to us the full text of the dispatch of the French Minister of Foreign Affairs proposing mediation, together with the replies of the Russian and English Governments. Prince GORTSCHAKOFF, it will be seen, argues, like Earl RUSSELL, that the proper time for mediation has not arrived. If, however, France should persist in her proposition, and Great Britain should acquiesce, plenipotentiaries will be sent to Baron BRUNOW at Washington to lend the French and English Ministers there, if not official aid, at least moral support.

The situation of affairs at Fredericksburgh, according to our last night's dispatches and correspondence, is growing exceedingly critical, and we need not be surprised to hear to-day of the mighty battle of arms. The rebels without doubt intend to dispute the crossing of the Rappahannock with all their strength. Their camp fires for the past few days have been constantly increasing in sight of Falmouth, and they have been constantly engaged in the erection of fortifications contiguous to the city of Fredericksburgh. LEE is known to have joined LONGSTREET, and the forces of the latter Rebel are known to be on the way, and probably JACKSON'S. Our correspondent with Gen. BURNSIDE'S army, however, telegraphing from Fairfax Court-house, says that information received there yesterday, is to the effect that the rebels are still in Rappahannock in considerable force, the scouts reporting STONEWALL'S headquarters at Upperville, and BRAGG'S at Culpeper. Parties of rebel cavalry are also reported at other points.

The Philadelphia Press makes this important statement: "Gen. FRANKLIN'S grand division is now moving to a point on the Rappahannock, south of Fredericksburgh, (we need not say where,) and will cross that river, flanking the rebel position and maintaining his own. To check this movement, JACKSON and HILL have been withdrawn from the Valley of the Shenandoah, and probably ordered to move east on the south bank of the Rappahannock, to check and flank FRANKLIN, while LEE falls upon him with a large force and annihilates him."

Late advices from Nashville render it probable that a battle will be fought at Murfreesboro, between the National army, under Gen. ROSECRANS, and the rebel army, under Gen. JOE JOHNSTON—that worthy, it is understood, having superseded BRAGG. A person who has arrived in Nashville from Chattanooga reports that a large force of rebels is on the move for Murfreesboro, and that the rebels are determined to fight there.

The guerrillas have nearly all disappeared from the Green River country in Kentucky, and the citizens of that region have begun banding together to keep them out. Colonels BRUCE and SHACKELFORD now hold Hopkinsville, and the troops at Mortonsville cut off the line of rebel communication between the Green River country and the South. ADAM JOHNSON has left for parts unknown, and most of his gang of thieves have followed. The remainder are being gathered in by Colonels FOSTER and SHANKS and Major HOLLOWAY, who is operating in the vicinity of Russellville.

Tennesseans coming through the Gaps in the neighborhood of Cumberland Gap, estimate the rebel force there at from 1,000 to 10,000. The Lexington (Ky.) Observer, however, believes the whole force of rebels at and in the immediate vicinity of the Gaps to be about one brigade—say 2,500 men. About 150 cavalry are reported to have gone from Big Creek to Cumberland Gap a few days since—it is supposed for the purpose of coming into Knox County foraging and taking prisoners. It is reported that the rebels hung four citizens of Whitley County during one of their raids about a week or two since.

Col. LEE, Chief of HAMILTON'S cavalry, returned to Grand Junction on the evening of Nov. 4, from a three days' reconnoissance in the direction of Ripley and ten miles south. Ripley was taken possession of and held for twenty-four hours, as was also the town of Grisaba, eight miles southwest. FAULKNER'S partisan rangers were the especial objects of his attention. He captured Lieut-Col. HOVIS and the Surgeon of the regiment, one Captain, two Lieutenants and sixty men. FAULKNER himself, with 150 men, was closely pressed, and his rear-guard attacked, but he managed to effect his escape with the loss of four men. Among the prisoners is Major BOGERS, one of the Fort Warren prisoners released on parole. Col. LEE also captured several horses and mules and a rebel mail at Orizaba. Our own loss was nothing.

Gen. LOGAN COZZENS, in a letter dated Frankfort, Nov. 14, urges the construction of a railroad through Cumberland Gap. He says of Chattanooga, as the southern terminus of the road: "It is not only the best point, but the only point combining great strength of natural position, with easiness of access from any point of the compass—fenced in, as it is by the Alleghany Mountains on the east, the Cumberland Mountains on the west, and the Sand Mountains on the south. The triangle of Chattanooga, Dalton and Cleveland could be rendered as impregnable as Gibraltar. It can be reached by the Sequatchie Valley, or viâ Kingstown and down the Tennessee. From that place a guard double-track road ought to be built to Danville, Kentucky, or its vicinity. Whence a branch, of 26 miles, would reach Lebanon, the present terminus of the road from Louisville; and another, 12 miles long, would strike the Kentucky River, to which place the Kentucky Central Railroad is nearly completed from Cincinnati. If this road had been completed ten years ago, we should never have had this bloody rebellion; for the North and the South would have learned to respect and depend on each other more than they have dared, and mutual intercourse, social and commercial, would have checked the extreme men of both sections in their ambitious projects. If it had been made, as suggested by the President, we should now have been in undisturbed possession of East Tennessee, as well as Middle and West Tennessee, and have saved the cost of the whole work in the transportation of troops and supplies."

It is reported that Gen. SHERMAN will shortly take the field, and Gen. LAUMAN, of Iowa, be commander of Memphis.

A gentleman who arrived at New-Orleans from Gen. WEITZEL'S camp just before the departure of the last steamer, learns that a cavalry company, under command of Lieut. FERRIS, recently made a reconnoissance to within four miles of Baton Rouge. It is reported that they found and took two pieces of artillery, one a brass 12-pounder.

Gen. MILROY, in his recent expedition to Crab Bottom, in Highland County, marched two hundred miles in eleven days. Among other things, he destroyed three saltpetre works and 1,000 pounds of saltpetre.

A dispatch from Washington informs us that the Annual Reports of the heads of Departments are nearly completed, with the exception of that of the Secretary of the Treasury. The President's Message will probably be transmitted to Congress on the first day of the session. No copies will be sent out in advance, but it will be telegraphed as soon as he reading is commenced.

GENERAL NEWS.

The stables of the Knickerbocker Ice Company, in Furman-street, Brooklyn, were destroyed by fire last evening, and a man named JAMES MCGUINNESS, together with twenty horses belonging to the Company, were consumed in the flames.

The Board of Aldermen met at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The name of LEONARD G. CARPENTER, for Street Commissioner, was rejected by 10 to 2. A resolution by Mr. MITCHELL, to procure a portrait of Gen. MCCLELLAN, at a cost of $1,000, was laid over under the rule. To the inquiry about neglect of street-cleaning, the City Inspector replied that bad weather and sweepers' strikes have prevented the progress of the work lately, but he assails the contract as the primal causes of most of the neglect, because it lacks proper conditions of enforcement. The communication was referred. A report from the Finance Committee, to appropriate $50,000 toward the building of a new Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum, was laid over. Adjourned till 1 o'clock on next Wednesday afternoon.

The keel of the new iron-clad vessel, Tonawanda, has been laid at the Philadelphia Navy-yard. The vessel will be 1,534 tons burden, and will carry four heavy pieces of ordnance.

The iron-clad United States steamer Sangamon, lately launched at Chester, Penn., is rapidly fitting out, and will be made ready for service at the earliest practicable time. The Lehigh, an iron-clad of the same capacity and size, will be ready for launching in about two weeks. Contracts have been entered into for the construction of other vessels of like character at the same locality.

The catalogue of Yale College for 1862-'63 has just been issued. The number of students in all departments is 617, of whom there are 157 professional students, classified as follows: Theology, 26; Law, 34; Medicine, 51; Philosophy and Arts, 47. The academical students are classed thus: Seniors, 122; Juniors, 110; Sophomores, 107; Freshmen, 121.

Bowdoin College, Maine, boasts of having furnished the following number of graduates to the Army of the Union: Brigadier-General, Acting Major-General, 1; Colonels, commanding brigades, 2; Colonels, commanding regiments, 3; Lieutenant-Colonels, 8; Majors, 11; Brigade-Surgeons and Division Medical Directors, 3; Brigade Surgeons, 4; Chaplains, 4; Captains, 41; First Lieutenants, 37; Second Lieutenants, 12; all others, 58. Total, 184.

FRANZ SCHENCK, arrested in Cincinnati under the extradition treaty with Saxony, charged with having committed forgery in that country, has been released after an investigation before Judge LEAVITT. Hon. GEO. E. PUGH and Judge DICKSON acted as his counsel.

An intercepted letter, dated at Mobile, Oct. 6, says: "Sugar is worth here from 34 to 40 cents; Molasses, $1 75 ⅌ gallon; bacon, 65 to 75 cents ⅌ lb.; coffee, $2 ⅌ lb.; lard, 50 cents ⅌ lb.; flour, $40 ⅌ bbl.; whisky, $15 ⅌ gallon; tobacco, 90 cents to $1 25 ⅌ lb.; cigars, good, from 25 to 50 cents each; common cotton osnaburgs, 75 to 90 cents ⅌ yard; corn, $2 ⅌ bushel; fodder, $2 ⅌ bundle, and all other things as high in proportion. Nails, $40 ⅌ 100 lbs; iron, 20 to 25 cents."

The Boston Journal, Traveller and Transcript have determined to raise the price of their daily issues to three cents per copy after Dec. 1. The Post, Advertiser and Courier will continue to be sold at three cents, as heretofore, but will reduce the size of their sheets, and the Herald, which has been sold at one cent, will advance to two cents.

Gen. CANBY, who is charged with the organization of the drafted men in camp at Pittsburgh, issued an order directing that, as soon as the organization of any company is complete by the muster of its officers into the service, the commander of the regiment, if the company belongs to a regimental organization, or the commandant of the camp, if it is unattached, will select an officer to proceed to the county or neighborhoods from which the company was drawn, for the purpose of bringing back all men who are absent without authority. Detailed lists of the absentees, whether recreants or deserters, will be furnished to the Commissioners and Provost-Marshals in the several counties, and to the officers sent out for the purpose of bringing in absentees. In the case of substitutes who have deserted, particular care will be taken to give the description and such other information as will aid in identifying and securing the apprehension of the deserters. The Commissioners for drafting are requested to furnish the Provost-Marshals, and other officers, any aid that may be in their power to secure the return of absentees to their duty.

A dispatch dated Pittsburgh, Nov. 23, says: "Fourteen tow-boats, with 105 barges, containing 963,000 bushels of coal, have left for Cincinnati, Louisville, Cairo and way points. A large amount of coal still remains in the pools on the Monongahela, unable to get out, there being no rise in this stream."

The St. Louis Republican understands that the assessment, under a recent order to raise $500,000 from Southern sympathizers in that city, has been, in the main, completed. It has heard a number of names of prominent citizens mentioned as being on the lists, and of sums ranging from $50 to $5,000 affixed to them; though it is not deemed prudent to give publicity to any of these names at present.

A magnificent ball is to be given in St. Louis by way of celebrating the recent emancipation victories in Missouri. Gen. FREMONT and other distinguished personages are expected to be in attendance.

Gen. SCHOFIELD arrived in St. Louis on Sunday night. He was accompanied by the following Staff officers: Lieut.-Col. MARSH, A. A. G.; Maj. COLE, Chief of Artillery; Maj. WHERRY, A. D. C.; Maj. ALLEN, A. D. C.; Maj. SHELDON, A. A. G. Gen. SCHOFIELD'S health, though not fully restored, is rapidly improving.

According to the Toronto Globe, it has been finally determined by the Customs Department, in calculating the depreciation in American currency, to split the difference between the rate of exchange and the premium on gold.

The drafted men in Pennsylvania have been ordered to the seat of war, and preparations are making to furnish them for an early start.

At the Circuit of the Supreme Court Justice MULLER has decided that newsdealers are not liable for libels contained in publications which they sell without a knowledge of the libelous contents. The decision was in an action brought against Messrs. ROSS & TOUSEY, with others, by one JOHN B. CHAPIN, one of FRANK LESLIE'S artists, who was unpleasantly noticed in the New-York Illustrated News, and which paper was sold by the defendants.

The Stock Market was dull and ⅛@¼ ⅌ cent lower yesterday. Gold fell off 1¾; Exchange, 2¼@2½. Money was generally dull on Wednesday. Breadstuffs again declined in price, yet there was limited business. Less activity was discernible in Provisions, Groceries, Tallow, Tobacco, Hops, Seeds, Oils, Metals and Candles. A good inquiry prevailed for Fish, Hay, Hides, Sole Leather and Whisky, the latter article at higher prices. No important movements transpired in Cotton, Naval Stores, Coal or Hemp. The Freight market was quiet, with 658 vessels of all classes in port.

Foreign Mediation—The Proposition of France.

We publish this morning the text of the proposition made by the French Minister of Foreign Affairs to the Governments of England and Russia. The idea of M. DROUYN DE L'HUYS was that of an armistice between the American belligerents, "to which," says he, "under present circumstances, no strategical objection can be made," and which he also urges on the ground of the "favorable dispositions toward peace which are beginning to manifest themselves in the North as well as in the South." The proposition itself is in the following words:

"The Emperor has therefore thought that the occasion has presented itself of offering to the belligerents the support of the good offices of the maritime Powers, and his Majesty has charged me to make the proposition of this Government to her Britannic Majesty, as well as to the Court of Russia. The three Cabinets would exert their influence at Washington, as well as with the Confederates, to obtain an armistice for six months, during which every act of war, direct or indirect, should provisionally cease on sea as well as on land, and it (the armistice) might be, if necessary, tacitly prolonged."

Neither of the two great Powers to which the proposal was made seem prepared to accept it, and there is no great probability that the French Emperor will undertake mediation alone.

In any event we see nothing in a proposition of mediation that need create uneasiness in the public mind. Whether mediation would help or hinder the Union cause depends on a good many circumstances. In the first place it depends on its character. It may be friendly, or it may be hostile, to the United States Government. If England were to offer it, probably it would be hostile: she would insist on the recognition of the Southern Confederacy, because she seeks to cripple the United States as a naval Power, to secure Free-Trade with the South, and to obtain a better foothold for influencing the commercial legislation of both sections. France has no such interests to secure. Her only rival and enemy on the sea is England,—and our destruction as a naval Power would leave France at the mercy of the British. NAPOLEON told Judge ROST, the Confederate Commissioner, a year ago, that he should regard the downfall of the naval power of the United States as a great misfortune for France—and so it would be. His interest now is precisely what it was then.

Naturally enough, NAPOLEON resists the tendency of this country toward extension over Mexico and the Isthmus. He always has sought, in various ways, a footing there for French commerce, and possibly for French colonies. And the present movement in Mexico, made at a time when he knows it to be safe, very probably aims at that result. But this is a movement against the South rather than the North. Extension southward has always been a Southern policy, and has rested on Southern necessities. And every far-sighted person knows that, if the South should secure her independence, her first step would be to enlarge her dominions. Her armies, made up of poor whites, ignorant, without occupation or means of support, and accustomed to arms, would demand military employment, and would be precisely the force required to conquer all the regions around the Gulf, and thus lay the foundations of a great Slave Empire. The very first thing that would follow recognition would be a war on Mexico—a renewal on a large scale of the filibustering raids upon Central America, and the attempted extension of Southern away to the Isthmus.

NAPOLEON would scarcely desire to favor this policy by securing Southern independence. His interest lies in restoring the Union, and in thus holding the South in check, so far as any such schemes of conquest may be involved. If he were to "mediate," therefore, there is reason to believe that it would be upon the basis of a restored Union. He might urge additional guarantees for the protection of the South, but he would scarcely insist on the disruption of the Nation. Nor is there any reason to suppose that Russia would join England rather than France in such an attempt at restoring peace. Her sympathies have always been with us, and her interests are largely involved in our continued existence as a first-class naval Power.

It seems to us highly probable, therefore, that if the three Powers should decide upon offering a joint mediation, it would be friendly to us, and on the basis of the existing Union. Of course it could do us no harm. Nor could mediation in favor of the South work us any substantial injury, unless backed by a threat of interference in the war. We do not think there is one chance in a hundred that either of the three Powers concerned would dream of such armed interposition. It could only prolong the war—increase the burdens and sufferings which it imposes on their subjects, and plant the seeds of future wars which would involve the world in carnage.

We trust our Government will give no more heed to these hints of mediation or intervention than the ordinary routine of diplomatic intercourse requires. We hope it will not be deemed necessary to send over a fresh batch of amateur outside agents to talk foreign nations into a friendly humor. Intelligent and well-disposed persons abroad must know enough of the controversy by this time not to need special missionary efforts for their enlightenment. Let our recognized Ministers attend to negotiation. Let our iron-clads be multiplied and made as serviceable as possible. Let heavy guns of the largest kind, throwing the heaviest and most effective projectiles, and made of the best material, be fabricated in numbers suited to any emergency, and then let the rebellion be crushed, for this is the best and only available means of preventing foreign interference. Already out of the mouths of the disloyal the assertion is made that the proposition of France is the immediate and necessary result of the advance of our armies.

Thanksgiving Day.

The recurrence of that day of the year upon which so large a proportion of this people have united as a Day of Thanksgiving to the Almighty for his numberless and inestimable blessings, must ever excite the profound emotions of devout and affectionate natures. It is gratifying to know that the day is to be observed the present year with remarkable unanimity and heartiness, not abating one jot of earnest loyalty to an honored and venerated custom by reason of present national disturbances; but, indeed, gathering unction and fervor from the exercise of that sublime faith that looks through and beyond the perils and darkness of the hour to the bright and eternal day that is to crown the rest of all the children of God. The world was not made alone for what we now see of it. Men were not created alone for the fitful struggles of this short life, nor for the brief and bloody drama they are now performing, and that we from day to day take active part in. The time will come when the riddle of life and the problem of the world will be read aright by all—when mortal foes shall lay aside the strife, in the spirit of which they thrust each other out of the world, and wonder that truth and freedom should need such sacrifices—when perpetual peace shall succeed to the discords of war, and universal brotherhood fold the humble race in unity and love.

If the people believe all this—and all Christian people do—then way should they not rejoice and give thanks to-day? The earth has given forth her increase, and plentiful harvests fill the land. The health of the people was never better. The power of the nation is extolled before the world. War has committed its ravages in the land, but we are comparatively blessed that the kindred curses of pestilence and famine are withheld. We have still a larger share of the prosperity of this life than is ordinarily allotted to nations; and our adversities are infinitely short of the full measure of punishment that our national sins deserve.

In every view, therefore, of our situation we find reasons for profound gratitude to the Almighty for his mercies and benefits, and one entire day is far too brief for the Thanksgiving we should utter.

The Campaign in Virginia.

The following is an extract of a letter from a gentleman whose military education and ability render his opinions on such a subject of more than ordinary value:

"——, Nov. 22, 1862.

As for the war, the prospect is gloomy. I only hope that BURNSIDE will not advance till the Spring. We have, it is true, an advantage in numbers; but this is fully compensated for by the strong defensive position of the Confederates. I am glad that the Gordonsville route was given up. It was almost impracticable, and, in case of a repulse, a retreat would have been most hazardous.

After carefully investigating the subject, and conversing with many men who ought to know, I have come to the conclusion that BURNSIDE has 150,000 effective men. Of these, 30,000, mostly under SIGEL, remain in the neighborhood of Manassas and the Upper Potomac to protect Washington from raids, etc. Gen. W—— tells me that the Government is accurately informed that LEE'S force, including JACKSON'S, does not exceed 100,000 men fit for action.

At this moment I believe that BURNSIDE, with 120,000 men, stands on the Rappahannock with LEE'S entire 100,000 men between him and Richmond. SIGEL'S 30,000 are indispensable in their present position and cannot join the main army till after LEE is so badly defeated as to be incapable of resuming the defensive. Were not SIGEL where he now is, JACKSON and LEE might have everything their own way. Leaving 20,000 men and a strong force of artillery in front of BURNSIDE, they might quietly move 60,000 men and fall on to the flank of FRANKLIN'S Grand Division on BURNSIDE'S right, cut it to pieces, get between BURNSIDE and Washington and obtain possession of the Capital long before the Federal army could be removed by water to its protection. Even now there is danger of the execution of such a movement in a limited degree. Could LEE penetrate between FRANKLIN and SIGEL, taking them both in flank, he might annihilate them in detail. He would have, to be sure, to make up his mind to lose Richmond if unsuccessful, for if defeated, he could not rejoin his communication with the Confederate capital, but would have to retreat to Gordonsville, leaving the door open to BURNSIDE. If the rebels should succeed in such a movement, the fate of the National capital and of the Union would be sealed; but rest confident in our Generals' ability to frustrate any such plan, by a speedy change of front on the first alarm. But LEE will not risk it; he has his entire force in a strong position in front of our army, and is confident in his ability to save Richmond, which will fully satisfy JEFF. DAVIS. Do not be alarmed about JACKSON; he is not in the Valley, but with LEE, and there he will remain till after the battle which I fear is about to be fought. The rebel Generals are not so destitute of military skill and common sense as to leave their ablest General and 20,000 veteran troops miles away, merely for the purpose of scaring old women and newspaper reporters, at a period when the great battle of the age is about to be fought. The force in the Shenandoah region about which we hear so much, consists only of some cavalry intended to keep up an alarm, and to prevent any more men being sent from SIGEL to BURNSIDE. Our army, if it advances, has to advance from the Rappahannock to Richmond. A movement on the James necessitates a division of the army, which means defeat. It would give LEE all the advantages of interior lines, against an invading force operating by a double line of operations.

No; to reach Richmond, 120,000 National soldiers must fight their way through 100,000 rebels, occupying chosen positions and fighting with the fury of desperation. I fear the result, and only hope that political intrigues will not compel HALLECK and BURNSIDE to fight against their better judgment. I am opposed to an advance in Virginia at present, as you perceive. Our iron-clads can keep Europe quiet and the South in alarm, while the Western Army pushes on to East Tennessee and Vicksburgh, so that the war will be by no means suspended, and then, in the Spring we will be far better prepared to strike a death-blow in Virginia. We lost our chance in September, when MCCLELLAN might have had everything his own way."

We see in this no reason whatever for postponing the attempt upon Richmond until Spring. True, we might be better prepared then than now, though we doubt it. The effect of a Winter of inactivity in camp would destroy more lives, disable more troops, and demoralize the whole army to a greater extent than an actual defeat in the field. But it must be borne in mind that the rebels would also employ the Winter in strengthening themselves. They would increase their numbers, enlarge their fortifications, and advance Richmond from the James River? The writer quoted above says this would divide the army. Not necessarily. We have plenty of troops available for such a service without touching one of those now under BURNSIDE. We can easily hurl from 50,000 to 75,000 men upon the rebel Capital, and still leave BURNSIDE with 150,000 to attack or oppose LEE, just as they could take Richmond unless LEE should send half his force to its rescue.

We take it for granted that Gens. HALLECK and BURNSIDE will not move in this matter until they are "ready." But we trust they will neither of them deem it necessary to wait till Spring, in the belief that we shall be any better able then than we are now to defeat the rebel armies.

The City Comptroller.

It seems scarcely worth while, in the face of the majority of thirty thousand given for the Democratic candidates at the late election, to try to elect a Republican to office in this City. But the canvass for Comptroller stands on ground so peculiar that it would be criminal to give it up without an effort—especially as there are good reasons for thinking that a vigorous effort will be successful.

The office is the most important connected with the City Government, not excepting that of Mayor. There is very little partisan patronage connected with it, and every man in the City is directly interested in having it well filled, because it controls to a very great extent the amount of taxation which falls upon every citizen. It is universally conceded that Comptroller HAWS has discharged the duties of the position with eminent ability, independence and success. The best possible proof of this is found in the fact that, in spite of the war and of the increased demands of the public service, the rate of taxation has actually been diminished during the present year. This has been effected by a rigid economy—by a prompt settlement of all just claims upon the City, and by stopping all leaks and every attempt to defraud the treasury. His political opponents universally concede that in all these respects the administration of Comptroller HAWS has been beyond reproach. The Sunday Times, a Democratic paper, says that under him "there is no longer any chance for dishonesty to get a foothold in the City Treasury."

This election will thoroughly test the question whether the majority of our people care more for honesty than for party in the financial affairs of the City. Mr. HAWS has been nominated by large bodies of men without regard to party. Indeed, if we can judge from such indications as meet our eyes, he will have the cordial and hearty support of the great mass of our citizens of all parties. His opponent has never filled any public offices except those of Police Captain and Police Justice, and neither of these gives him any special qualification for the intricate and responsible duties of the position for which he has now been nominated. Mr. HAWS enjoys the universal confidence of all our citizens, and we trust he will receive their active and hearty support. As the contest now lies exclusively between him and Mr. BREHMAN, there ought to be no doubt of the result.

Speed on the Argosy.

Thanksgiving—the day specially set apart for the manifestation of gratitude to Providence—has again dawned. It ought to be the day of all others for high impulses and noble deeds; for, most assuredly, there is no such way of showing ourselves grateful as by being ourselves gracious, or of honoring the All-Bountiful as by disposing freely of our bounty. We cannot, then, let our issue this morning pass without once more invoking the friendly succor of the great-hearted Christian public for our—shall we say, enemies? Thank Heaven, we are not obliged to use that word for our friends, the famishing operatives of England.

We say friendly succor. Hitherto they have not received even the barest, scantiest, coldest justice. England has been denounced sweepingly and by the wholesale, just as if its toiling millions were no part of her people. Those masses have abided month after month, and season after season, our fast friends; and because, forsooth, they had no great organs in the Press to give tongue to their feelings, we have made no account of them, and have loaded all alike with reproaches. It has been all wrong. The censure of the British people has been too indiscriminate. The unfriendly spirit which has from the outset been exhibited toward us by the great majority of the public men and public journals of Great Britain, has been too readily accepted as an exponent of its universal feeling. And yet nothing is more certain than that the sympathies and hopes of the workingmen of England and Scotland have been and still are with us and against the rebels. While the upper ranks, almost to a man, are eager for the disunion and downfall of this Republic, and while the middle classes are generally willing that almost any evil should befall us rather than that their commercial and manufacturing embarrassments should longer continue, the laboring classes have kept true to the cause which they recognize to be the cause of civil liberty and popular rights.

Let us, for a moment, look at this matter fairly. Here stands the British operative—one of that class which DICKENS meant when he said, years ago, "the very lives of two millions of the kingdom hang upon a single cotton thread." For the last year and a half he has seen our war against the rebels gradually attenuating that thread, and starvation, or pauperism, which is to him almost as dreadful, daily drawing closer upon himself, his wife and his little ones. He has seen the three months, which were originally named as the period of the war, extended to twenty, without any substantial approach against it a week. The fear of a Servile revolution would have swept down every neutral policy, and interference, let what might come of it, would have been no hazardous as fate. The British operatives have steadfastly refused to join in any such cry. Through it all, they have not shown one symptom of a disposition to desert our cause, and take the side of our enemies.

For this heroic fidelity, we say, God bless them! and for this we declare, on this Thanksgiving morn, that it is our peculiar duty to aid in rescuing them from the terrible calamity that, because of it all, is now overwhelming them.

Christmas is coming, the day these true-hearted friends of ours have been wont to make the brightest in their calendar. Let us make it again as this dreary year. Our granaries are bursting with the food for which they and their children are starving. Fill up the ships with a portion of that magnificent harvest for which we thank God to-day, and pour it as free as God's sunshine glorious Christmas gift—into the despairing homes of the men who will not barter and sell their but our birthright for a mess of pottage. Give them some sign that we recognize their heroism, that we sympathize with their sufferings, that we acknowledge a common brotherhood. Put this sign in the substantial, blessed shape of life-giving food, and its moral effect throughout Europe in our favor would be worth a dozen victories. It would knit all the liberty-loving masses, from Scotland to Sicily, in yet closer sympathy with us, and would inspire every ruler's heart with greater fear than ever of acting to our hurt. Speed us, then, the argosy!

"From kings and nobles we will earth no alms
Aid, friendship nor Alliance. With the Poor
We make our treaty, and the heart of man
Sets the proud seal of his allegiance there,
And ratifies the compact."

NEWSPAPERS.—The Boston newspapers have advanced their price from two to three cents a copy. The New-York newspapers will do the same thing just as soon as they can make up their minds that the world is large enough for all of them. Up to the present time, each seems so fearful of losing its own position that they all prefer giving for two cents what costs them four or five, to running the risk of making any change.

Every article that enters into the composition of a newspaper costs much more than it has ever done before. White paper, which is the most expensive of those articles, now sells for 18 and 20 cents a pound,—while less has hitherto been the outside price. A ream, consisting of 480 sheets, weighs 50 pounds, and costs $9 to $10;—and brings back, at the wholesale price of a cent and a half per sheet after it has been printed promptly $7 20. On the cost of white paper alone, therefore, there is a clear loss of over $5 on every thousand printed,—which, together with the cost of type-setting, correspondence, reporting, editing, telegrams, &c., &c., is to be met by advertisers. The result is that the advertising community furnish the reading community with newspapers at less than half their cost.

Whether this will continue to be the case remains to be seen. Newspapers in all the principal cities of the North are raising their price, and the probability is that in due time those of New-York will follow their example.

MR. HAWS FOR COMPTROLLER.—By the following figures, showing the returns of the State and Municipal elections in 1860, it will be seen that the State election is no criterion as to what will be the result of a municipal contest in which no political principle is at stake:

| | |
|---|---|
| The whole number of votes cast for Governor in that year was | 69,989 |
| The vote cast for Amasa J. Parker, Dem. | 65,154 |
| R. D. Morgan, Rep. | 31,882 |
| Democratic majority | 18,156 |
| At the election of Comptroller in December following the whole number of votes cast was | 65,000 |
| Robert T. Haws received | 36,000 |
| George H. Purser, Tammany | 18,000 |
| Stephen P. Russell, Mozart | 11,000 — 29,000 |
| Haws over both | 7,000 |

VALUABLE MAPS.—Messrs. E. & G. W. BLUNT have recently issued two contributions to hydrography, which will be as indispensable to the seaman as to the navigator. One is a chart of the "Bahama Islands," giving full details of all the intricate windings of that archipelago; the soundings with the utmost minuteness, and all the data necessary to show the difficulties of checking rebel intercourse between Nassau and Charleston. The other is a map of "Charleston and its Vicinity," displaying all the water passages, inlets, islands and coast lines from the upper extend Bull Bay to Bitter Island. The topography is exceedingly full and accurate, extending almost to the centre of the State, while every peculiarity of the shore is conscientiously noted. The publications of the Messrs. BLUNT need no voucher for their excellence and fidelity.

Another Remittance from Oregon for the United States Sanitary Commission.

The Sanitary Commission has just received from the people of Oregon, through Hon. ASHBY HARPER, a further contribution of more than two thousand dollars, making the whole amount thus far contributed by that remote and infant State, $12,[illegible].

A portion of this remittance comes in the shape of notes, bearing the following indorsement:

"This note was given by the Government of the United States for services in taking care of wounded soldiers of the Indian war in Oregon, in the years 1855 and 1856, known as the Yackemish War. Freely I send it upon an errand of mercy to the Sanitary Commission of the Armies of the United States, hoping that it may relieve the wants and sufferings of some loyal soldier, who has as high an appreciation of the benefits of the United States Government as its donor. Let patriots pass it along, and keep it moving in the good cause.

PORTLAND, Oregon, Sept. 1, 1862. A. C. R. G."

ARRIVAL OF THE AFRICA.

THE AMERICAN QUESTION.

The Circular Letter of the French Government in Favor of Mediation.

RESPONSE OF ENGLAND AND RUSSIA.

BOTH DECLINE CO-OPERATION.

Halifax, Wednesday, Nov. 26.

The steamship Africa arrived at this port at 10 o'clock this morning. The following is additional to the intelligence telegraphed from Cape Race:—

Liverpool, Nov. 12—Evening.

The London Morning Herald bitterly denounces the non-intervention policy of the British Government and says that the language of Lord John Russell's dispatch "excites the anger and insults the feelings of half a million starving English laboring people."

The Herald then charges the British Cabinet with a mean cowardice and dastardly submission in order to retain the Parliamentary good will of the Bright combination party."

The London Daily News thinks that Lord Russell's answer is the best that could have been made while adhering unanimously upon a discussion of the merits of the case, and rejoices at having escaped from attempting diplomatic remonstrances with France.

THE CORRESPONDENCE.

WITH PRINCIPAL SECRETARY OF GOVERNMENT FROM FRANCE.

The following is the dispatch of the French Minister of Foreign Affairs, addressed to the Ambassadors of France at London and St. Petersburgh:

From the Moniteur.

PARIS, Oct. 30.

The eyes and hearts with painful interest the struggle which has been raging more than a year upon the American Continent. The hostilities have provoked sacrifices and efforts entirely of a nature to inspire the highest idea of the perseverance and energy of the two populations. But this spectacle, which does so much honor to their courage, is only effected at the price of numberless calamities, and a considerable effusion of blood. To these results of civil war, which, from the very first, excited vast apprehension, there is still to be added the apprehension of servile war, which would be the culminating point of so many irreparable disasters. The suffering of a nation toward whom we have always professed a sincere friendship, would have sufficed to excite the sincere solicitude of the Emperor, even had we ourselves not suffered by the counter blow of these events.

Under the influence of intimate relations which an uninterrupted intercourse has multiplied between the various regions of the globe, Europe itself has suffered from the consequence of the crisis which has dried up one of the most fruitful sources of public wealth, and which has become, for the great centres of labor, a cause of most sad trial.

As you are aware, when the conflict commenced, we held it our duty to observe the most strict neutrality in concert with other maritime Powers, and the Washington Cabinet has repeatedly acknowledged the honorable manner with which we adhered to that line of conduct. The sentiments dictated to us have undergone no change but of a benevolent character. Thus impartiality, instead of imposing upon the Powers the attitude which might resemble indifference, ought rather to make them of service to the two parties by helping them out of a position which seems to have no issue. From the commencement of the war an armed force was set on foot by the belligerents, which, since then, has almost constantly been kept up. After so much bloodshed they are now, in that respect, nearly in the same position. Nothing authorizing the presumption that more decisive military operations will shortly occur, according to the last news received in Europe. The two armies, on the contrary, were in a condition that would not allow either party to hope within a brief delay for any decided advantage to turn the balance and accelerate the conclusion of a peace.

All these circumstances, taken together, point to the opportunity of an armistice, to which, moreover, under the present circumstances, no strategical objection can be made. The favorable dispositions toward peace which are beginning to manifest themselves in the North, as well as the South, might, on the other hand, second steps that might be made to recommend the idea of a truce. The Emperor has, therefore, thought that the occasion has presented itself of offering to the belligerents the support of the good offices of the Maritime Powers; and His Majesty has charged me to make the proposition of this Government to Her Britannic Majesty, as well as to the Court of Russia. The three Cabinets would exert their influence at Washington, as well as with the Confederates, to obtain an armistice for six months, during which every act of war, direct or indirect, should provisionally cease on sea, as well as on land, and it might be, if necessary, illusorily prolonged.

The overtures, I need not say, Sir, would not imply, on our part, any judgment on the origin or issue of the struggle, nor any pressure upon the negotiations which might, it is to be hoped, ensue in favor of an armistice. Our task would consist solely in establishing down obstacles, and in interfering only in a friendly determined upon by the two parties. We should not, in fact, believe ourselves called upon to decide, but to prepare the solution of difficulties which, hitherto, have opposed reconciliation between the belligerent parties. Would not, moreover, an agreement between the three Courts respond sufficiently to their intentions? Would it not give to their step the character of evident impartiality? Acting in concert, they would combine the conditions best suited to inspire confidence.

The Government of the Emperor, by the constant tradition of French policy toward the United States—England by the community of race—Russia, by the marks of friendship she has never ceased to show to the Washington Cabinet. Should the event not justify the hope of the three Powers, and should the order of the struggle overrule the wisdom of their counsels, this attempt would not be the less honorable for them. They would have fulfilled a duty of humanity, more especially indicated in a war which has excited passions which render all direct attempts at negotiation more difficult. It is the mis-

[illegible]

[illegible] the property blockade, and a refusal from Washington of the general line would prevent any speedy recovery of the ships. Her Majesty's Government, therefore, thinks it would be better to watch carefully the progress of opinion in America, and if, as there appears reason to hope, it may be found to have undergone, or may undergo hereafter, any change, the three Courts might then avail themselves of such change to offer their friendly counsel, with a greater prospect than now exists of its being accepted by the two contending parties.

Her Majesty's Government will communicate to that of France any intelligence they may receive from Washington or Richmond, bearing on this important subject.

Your Excellency may read this dispatch to M. Drouyn de L'Huys, and give him a copy of it.

(Signed,) RUSSELL.

GENERAL SOCIETY OF MECHANICS AND TRADESMEN.

The course of Lectures for 1862 will be given at IRVING HALL, Irving-place, corner of 16th-st. The opening lecture will be delivered by Rev. A. A. WILBUR, on FRIDAY EVENING, 28th inst., commencing at 8 o'clock. Subject—THE SPIRIT FOR THE TIMES.

DR. HARRISON'S
CHALYBEATE TONIC,

A new and valuable remedy, by one of the most eminent medical chemists in this country, for the entire removal and permanent cure of DYSPEPSIA, NERVOUS AND MUSCULAR DEBILITY, LOW SPIRITS, BRONCHITIS, SCROFULA, TORPID LIVER, CONSTIPATION, FEMALE IRREGULARITIES, and all diseases arising from an impure state of the blood.

When used in connection with his celebrated PERISTALTIC LOZENGES, it is a genuine remedy for RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, and a wonderful specific for the GOUT.

THE TONIC is made from the pure native CATAWBA WINE and is one of the most invigorating cordials ever known, joined with the most efficacious form of IRON, a delightful restorer of exhausted nature, imparting great vigor to the nervous energy, greatly increasing the appetite and promoting thorough digestion, so that even persons suffering from excessive indulgence, impotency or premature age, is imparts the vigor, freshness and buoyancy of youth.

For sale by HEGEMAN & CO.,
Nos. 203, 390, 611, 756 Broadway, and 175th-st., cor. 4th-av.

ELECTION—TUESDAY, Dec. 2.

SIXTH ALDERMANIC DISTRICT.
CITIZENS' CANDIDATE FOR ALDERMAN,
ALEXANDER H. KEECH.

The undersigned, residents of the Fifth Aldermanic District, press the name of ALEX. H. KEECH before the voters of the District, as the Citizens' candidate for Alderman in the coming election.

During the time Mr. Keech has been connected with the City Government, as a member of the Board of Councilmen, his success has been such as to merit the approbation of our citizens generally, and we feel confident that, if elected to the position above named, his acts will redound to the benefit of our new overburdened tax-payers, as well as to the immediate wants of his District.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

LES MISERABLES.
BY VICTOR HUGO.
W. I. POOLEY & CO., Publishers.

The celebrity which this wonderful work has celebrated and the attention which it has created throughout Europe in the original, are more than equalled through the unexampled success of Lacroix Wrinkell and M. Hugelin's translation of the work into English, as published by W. I. POOLEY & Co.

The publishers present this week to Booksellers and the Public—

First—Because it is an CONSISTENT LITERAL translation.

Second—Because it WAS ONLY ENGLISH TRANSLATION APPROVED BY VICTOR HUGO, HIMSELF.

The price of POOLEY & CO.'S Edition—FOR THE FIVE VOLUMES COMPLETE, bound in one large octavo volume, muslin—is but $2 50, and in paper covers $1—easily the cheapest and most elaborated works ever issued from the American Press.

Evidence of the popularity of POOLEY & CO.'S Edition is given in the fact that those who have read the so-called translation first published here—and satisfied—now buy the translation of Wrinkell & Hugelin, that they may get VICTOR HUGO'S MEANING, AS HIS GENIUS APPROVES IT.

Buyers are cautioned to notice that W. I. POOLEY & CO.'S imprint is on the title page, and they will be sure to get the only true translation yet published.

The book will be sent by mail, pre-paid, on receipt of price.

U. S. "Five-Twenty" Year GOLD BONDS,

SEN. PAR. CENT.

COUPON AND REGISTERED IN DENOMINATIONS OF $50, $100, $500, $1,000 AND $5,000.

CONSTANTLY ON HAND AND FOR SALE AT PAR.

INTEREST TO COMMENCE FROM DATE OF PURCHASE.

Subscriptions on these Bonds will be received at the office of the undersigned, publishers of the Tribune, and all the Banks and Bankers in the United States, and Bankers in Europe, who will receive subscriptions at the same rate of premium on Gold as may be current at the date of subscription, and deliver the Bonds without delay in Europe, or in Washington, at the option of the subscriber, free of all charges for transportation, insurance, or commission.

Subscribers will be allowed to receive the Bonds at any time after subscription, and will be credited with the interest accrued thereon, at the rate of six per cent. per annum, from the date of their respective payments, in lieu of the premium on Gold, which is the equivalent of the interest, and pay the balance of the purchase money in Gold, or its equivalent, at the rate of premium on Gold at the date of subscription.

The Bonds are offered to investors upon the ground that they are the best, most profitable, and most convenient form of investment now offered by the Government, and that the subscribers, in taking them, are lending to the Government the same class of money which has been so freely and promptly loaned to it during the war, and which has been so eminently conducive to the success of the Government and the preservation of the Union.

The Bonds are exempt from taxation by the United States, or any State or municipality, and are free from any kind of tax, duty, or impost, and are, in fact, the most desirable security now offered by the Government, as well as the most profitable for investment in the United States, considering the security, the exemption from taxation, and the rate of interest.

The interest is payable in COIN, which is equivalent to a large income, and is the same in value as the principal, which is payable in COIN, or its equivalent, at the option of the holder.

Subscribers may be assured that the Bonds will be delivered promptly, and that the subscribers will do all in their power to promote the convenience and gratification of the public, and to deserve a continuance of the patronage and confidence so liberally bestowed upon them during the past year.

Circulars containing full information, with the form of application for the Bonds, will be forwarded on application to the undersigned, or any of the Banks or Bankers.

REAL ESTATE FOR SALE.

FORECLOSURE SALE.—THE LARGE PROPERTY advertised to be sold under mortgage foreclosure, on TUESDAY, Dec. 2, at 12 M., at Trinity Building, (Section,) No. 111 Broadway, consisting, by survey, of about 187 City lots, of 25 by 100 feet, with large extension and approximate stabling, &c. &c., &c., at FORT WASHINGTON.

With the sold Albany-lane in the street. Terms: cash in 30 days, with the usual deposit. The amount of the purchase money, over the sum of $40,000, which is needed to free the same, &c., can, if desired by the buyer, remain on mortgage. The sale will be positive at the above date and hour. There will be no postponement.

There is every probability that a large park, with a reservoir of 20,000,000 gallons of water, will shortly be located on the hill north of this land, and south of Mr. Bennett's property, and terminate on the Depot-lane, which bounds this property on the north. The eastern line of the park being Broadway, and the western line of the land known as North-avenue, to be the length the property of Charles O'Conor, Esq., to said Depot-lane, the proposed south boundary.

FOR SALE.—HOUSE FIFTY FEET FRONT BY 60 in depth, improved in 4 lots, 20 feet by 18[illegible] feet each; situated on the corner of Henry-st. and Pierrepont-place, in South Brooklyn. The garden well stocked with choice fruits, and the best quality of fruit-trees. The house is complete with every modern convenience—hot and cold water, the finest of sewerage, pipes, hot water boiler—upper story fitted up as a billiard-room. No nuisance, and the house overlooking and facing gardens on three sides.

For terms, which will be made convenient to the purchaser, inquire of E. S. MUNSON,
No. 37 William-st., N. Y.,
or on the premises.

FOR SALE—THREE-STORY, BASEMENT AND attic brick house and lot, No. 237 Henry-st., Brooklyn, within three blocks of six churches, five to eight minutes' walk from South or Hamilton ferry; neighborhood unexceptionable; will be sold very low; terms to accommodate. Apply to B. ROCKWELL, No. 84 Broad-st., New-York.

FOR SALE—ONE OF THE FIVE THREE-STORY brick dwelling-houses, now finishing, with free-stone fronts, high stoops, basement and first story, and all the modern improvements, built by the Messrs. Thompson, house 20x40, lot 20x100, north side of 70th-st., near 4th-av., and within one block of the Hamilton and Skating Pond of the Central Park. Apply to M. SMITH, No. 1 Pine-st., or of Mr. THORP, on the premises.

FOR SALE CHEAP.—TWO WELL-BUILT brick houses, 19 feet front by 50 deep, 3 stories and basement, three stories high, with all modern improvements; each $1,[illegible]; let one-half the block. Inquire on the premises.

FOR SALE—A VILLA HOUSE AND SIX LOTS in Brooklyn, situated at the northwest corner of Gates and Bedford-avs. Price $16,000; prior mortgage on land and mortgage. Possession given immediately. IRVING & WINTHROP, No. 44 Nassau-st.

FOR SALE CHEAP—IN SIXTEENTH ST., near Irving place, a full sized house and lot, in good order. For further particulars inquire of WILLIAM ANTHES, No. 28 Pine-st.

FOR SALE.—THE THREE-STORY AND HIGH basement brick house No. 242 West 38th-st. Inquire on the premises, or at No. 227 Washington-st.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Nov. 26.

THE CASE OF GEN. FITZ-JOHN PORTER.

An eminent lawyer, occupying a high official position, has given the opinion that Gen. Fitz-John Porter cannot legally be tried by the Court organized for that duty. The objection is based on purely technical grounds, and can be obviated by the appointment of another Court; but it is believed that enough delay will be interposed to fatally prevent any investigation being reached. Although the public has frequently been informed that Gen. Porter is ordered here to testify on the trial of Gen. Porter, yet it is quite certain that no such order has been sent. The delay is charged to Gen. HALLECK, who is suspected of having prevented its transmission, and of hoping thereby that Gen. Porter shall not appear.

ANOTHER COMMISSION ORDERED.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY, ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE, WASHINGTON, Nov. 25, 1862.

Military Commission, No. 224.—(Extract.)—Third.—The Military Commission ordered to assemble in this city on the 24th inst., by Special Order No. 260, Nov. 17, 1862, from Headquarters of the army, is hereby dissolved, and a general Court-martial is hereby appointed to meet in this city on the 27th inst., at 11 o'clock A. M., or as soon thereafter as practicable, for the trial of Gen. Fitz John Porter, United States Volunteers, which the Court, Maj.-Gen. David Hunter, United States Volunteers; Maj.-Gen. E. A. Hitchcock, United States Volunteers; Brig.-Gen. Rufus King, United States Volunteers; Brig.-Gen. R. B. Franklin, United States Volunteers; Brig.-Gen. J. J. Abercrombie, U. S. V., Brig.-Gen. Silas Casey, U. S. V., Brig.-Gen. James A. Garfield, U. S. V., Brig.-Gen. N. B. Buford, U. S. V.; Brevet Brig.-Gen. W. W. Morris, U. S. A. Col. J. Holt, Judge Advocate General U. S. A. Judge Advocate and Recorder of the Court.

No other officers than those named can be assembled without manifest injury to the service.

By command of Maj.-Gen. HALLECK.

E. D. TOWNSEND, A. A. General.

DIFFICULTIES ABOUT THE TAX LAW.

A Committee is here, consisting of three Assessors from the principal districts of each of the Cities of New-York, Philadelphia and Boston, for the purpose of putting out to the Secretary of the Treasury radical defects in the Revenue laws, which must be amended before they can be put into successful operation. An interview has been arranged for to-morrow.

THE PRESIDENT AND THE PRINCE.

The first visit of Prince John with the President has not proved a success. In fact, he sustained a reverse, and retired, not in the best order, to await reinforcements. He should not have acted in the absence of Secretary; and he probably forgot the fact that Fernando Wood had proclaimed it to be his own special mission to "go to the President and tell him," &c.

But Mr. VAN BUREN called at the White House and relieved the embarrassment. Of course he insisted that the President should reverse the policy of his Emancipation Proclamation; and his dismay may be imagined on learning from very intelligible statements, that no outside influences from the Northern opposition of the new gospel of peace, would be effectual in shaking the determination of the Executive to carry out with firmness the policy he had adopted with deliberation. Moreover, it was made evident to his apprehension that no propositions for peace could, under any circumstances, be entertained from the "wayward sisters," so long as said sisters were in armed rebellion against the Government.

When will Mr. WOOD follow up this repulse of the vanguard, with an attack in force by the main body?

THE FEMALE ADVANCE UPON RICHMOND.

Under the order just made by Assistant Judge-Advocate TURNER relating to ladies going South, a Government escort will leave Baltimore for Fortress Monroe on the 10th of December, having in charge a number of ladies who have filed applications for permission to join their families and friends in the rebel States. Their names will be first published. An expedition may be made up to start a week or two earlier, if the number of permits continue to be granted as at present.

THE AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

The Commissioner of Agriculture has ordered a supply of foreign grain for distribution in the Spring. Wheat from England and France, rye from Russia, and oats from Sweden, will be placed at the disposal of our farmers, with a choice variety of new and valuable flower and vegetable seeds. The first report of the new department will be presented to Congress during the Winter, and will, it is said, be a more attractive and popular volume upon agriculture and horticulture than has yet been issued under the auspices of the Government.

ATTEMPTED FRAUD UPON THE MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

A few days since Surgeon-General HAMMOND received from EDWARD S. WAYNE, of Cincinnati, Ohio, samples of what purported to be "granulated beef tea," prepared for hospital use. Mr. WAYNE wished to secure a contract to furnish the Medical Department with the article, and nearly succeeded in obtaining the sanction of the Surgeon-General, who, knowing the respectability of the parties offering it, had no suspicion of fraud. Previous, however, to entering into contract with them, the Surgeon-General placed the sample in the hands of Dr. WOOSTER with a view to ascertain, by chemical analysis, the amount of muscular fibre it contained, when, lo! it was found to be nothing but starch, without a particle of beef in its composition. When subjected to a test with iodine, the substance assumes an indigo color, a result only obtained in articles in which starch is a component, and a most infallible test to prove its presence.

PROPOSALS INVITED.

Gen. RIPLEY, Chief of Ordnance, invites proposals for furnishing the Government with five thousand five-inch solid shot, one thousand fifteen-inch shell, and one thousand fifteen-inch battering shot. The projectiles are to be made of the kind of metal, and manufactured according to the rules laid down in the Ordnance Manual, with the exception of the battering shot, which must be made of what is known as gun-metal. The projectiles are to be delivered, free of charge, for transportation, at the arsenal on Governor's Island, in the harbor of New-York, where they will be inspected by competent officers appointed for the purpose. The proposals will be received until the 5th of December.

The Commissary Department invites inventors and manufacturers to present models and samples of portable mills for grinding corn and wheat for the use of the army. The mills are not to weigh over twenty-five pounds.

PERSONAL.

Hon. JOHN J. CRITTENDEN, of Kentucky, has taken a private residence here for the season. Several members of Congress and distinguished politicians have rented residences here during the session of Congress, and the approaching Winter promises to be a gay one.

Mrs. LINCOLN, who, for several weeks past, has been sojourning at the Metropolitan Hotel in your City, is expected to return to Washington the present week.

Senator IRA HARRIS left here to-day for Harper's Ferry, to visit his son, who is lying ill there with typhoid fever.

Hon. WM. MCKEE DUNN, Member of Congress from Indiana, and late of Gen. MCCLELLAN'S Staff, arrived here on Tuesday, and is stopping at the National.

Surgeon JOHN HORSTMAN, of the Chestnut Hill Hospital, Philadelphia, was here recently to consult with Surgeon-General HAMMOND, in regard to opening that hospital immediately for the reception of patients.

ARMY HIDES AND TALLOW.

The bids for contracts for hides and tallow of the [illegible]

[illegible] Court will hear motion, and then [illegible] on Friday.
